Music Camp Terminates Successful Year

Banner Elk, Aug. 9.—August 10 terminates the initial season of the newly established Southern Appalachian Music camp, whose success during this year of economic distress augurs well for its becoming the mecca for high school musicians of the south during the hot summer months in the future. In an altitude of 4,000 feet the campers enjoyed the average temperature of 71 degrees during the period when the mercury hovered around the 100 mark in many cities. Six states were represented in the camp this summer.

The camp's orchestra under the baton of J. Garfield Chapman, head of the violin department of the Cleveland school of music and the University of Akron, and C. D. Kutschinski of Winston-Salem, musical director of the camp, and co-founder has given weekly concerts of high calibre each Saturday night during the six weeks session, and last Sunday afternoon gave a special sacred concert. In addition to the weekly orchestra concerts held in the Lees-McRae auditorium the camp's band provided the Banner Elk community and visitors with occasional promenade concerts on the new roof-garden of Pinnacle Inn, and the camp choir enriched the Sunday service in the unique rock church with appropriate music.
