

Al And Roosevelt Shake Hands And Are Friends Again

"How Are You, Old Potato," Al Says To Franklin. Greeting "From Heart."

Convention Hall, Albany, Oct. 5.—Alfred E. Smith, once more the "Happy Warrior," in a dramatic reconciliation scene with Franklin D. Roosevelt, last night made a "fighting speech" in urging the New York Governor's election to the Presidency.

The former governor, estranged from his friend, Roosevelt, since the Chicago Democratic convention, did not mention the name of the candidate, who sat, broadly grinning, two feet behind him.

The reconciliation scene came at the close of a day that found Roosevelt and Smith fighting on the same side of a bitter controversy—the nomination of Lieutenant-Governor Herbert H. Lehman for governor.

Smith's address followed a scene of intense drama, when the two men met for the first time since Smith returned, a sullen, beaten man, from Chicago, on the platform of the party's state convention.

Then, walking to the platform, he strode across the dais to greet Roosevelt, who stood waiting for him.

"How are you, you old potato?" asked Smith, loud enough for his words to carry into the first rows.

"I'm glad to see you, Al," Roosevelt answered.

Smith nearly jerked Roosevelt's arm from its resting place on the desk, so warm was his greeting.

The crowd yelled, stamped and howled its delight, but quieted down after several minutes of tumult, to listen to Al Smith's nominating speech for his friend—and Roosevelt's friend—Herbert H. Lehman.

Smith and Roosevelt still stood, clasping hands, while the demonstration progressed. Then the Governor spoke.

"Al," he said, "this is from the heart."

Smith launched into an immediate reference to the national campaign, and scored the Republican party heavily.

Governor Roosevelt followed Al Smith's speech intently and smiled broadly as the former governor lashed the administration.

Smith began immediately to decide the Republican record of the past four years.

"A chicken in every pot, two cars in every garage," that's what they promised four years ago," he said.

"Why, the common laborer," according to them, was going to go to work in silk socks."

Use Of Present Highway 20 Will Save Lots Money

of as the Hopper park direct route would cost $126,000. The second route, much along the present route's route, would cost $78,000 if a bridge is necessary over Broad river, and $38,000 if a bridge is not necessary.

The actual figures of the survey were given as follows: Route 1—Line A-C from Shelby on a direct line by Hoppers park for a distance of 5.91 miles. This would include new bridge over Broad river and also a large culvert over a ravine in Hoppers park. Total cost $126,283.

Route 2—Line A-B-C, being the present route in use, will cost $78,046 with new bridge, or $38,906 without new bridge.

Route 3—If we can start at route 20, point D where Dover road intersects, and follow to B (Dover mill store) on to C, the cost will be $28,958.

Other Roads Talked Along with the cost figures and map sent here was the following comment on the Polkville road and other proposed road improvements in the county. "In view of the fact that Cleveland county is interested in improving a number of its roads, including a new state highway to begin at Zoar church and go thence by Boiling Springs to Cliffside, I hope that these figures will be studied in the light of your county's needs, and then advise what you consider for the best interest of Cleveland county, considering the whole needs of the county."

"You will note that if we can follow the route from No. 20, we can save almost $100,000 over constructing the Hoppers park road. If we constructed this route, the people on the part of No. 190 not included in this Hoppers park route would naturally expect us to surface treat a connection to Dover Mill either now or at some near future date."

"From the standpoint of the highway commission, we are interested in giving you the greatest possible road service for the money we spend. If you should see fit to recommend to either to follow the existing route or to start from No. 20, this does not preclude the building some day of a new connection into Shelby. It would simply postpone this extension until such a time as traffic makes it necessary."

"We are hopeful of being able to include in this program the road from Polkville by way of Lawdale to Fallston; and if you adopt the cheaper routes for the Polkville-Shelby route, it will be possible also to include this Zoar-Boiling Springs road, certainly to Boiling Springs and perhaps to Cliffside, depending whether or not the federal government will require a new bridge on this route or will permit us to utilize the old bridge for a while longer."

"We have placed this project in our schedule for November 1 letting, and desire to push it as rapidly as possible. There must, however, now be made a decision as to the route to be followed."

Complete Figures With the map are detailed figures of the estimated cost for excavating, common and rock, piping, concrete work and bridges, for the three surveyed routes. These can be seen at The Star office.
