

County Official Takes Own Life

Mecklenburg County Treasurer and Brother of Mrs. M. A. McSwain, a Suicide.

S. E. Cornwell, Mecklenburg county treasurer and brother of Mrs. M. A. McSwain of S. DeKain street, Shelby, shot and killed himself at the Mecklenburg county court house Monday morning with out any warning or explanation.

The treasurer was found dead slumped in a chair in a room of the rear of the civil courtroom, by Judge G. J. Gower when he entered to hang up his hat before opening court. A revolver was found near it. It is believed Cornwell took his own life shortly after he arrived at the building about 7.30.

Coroner Frank Hovis said it was unquestionably a case of suicide. Immediately after the news of his suicide became spread, banks of the city notified county officials they would not honor checks signed by Cornwell, pending the solution of legal problems raised by his death.

The board of county commissioners authorized its chairman, Joe A. Sherrill, to sign payrolls and checks until a new treasurer is selected. Cornwell had served two terms, and was the Democratic nominee for re-election.

Health Was Bad
Mr. Cornwell walked with crutches. One leg was amputated several years ago as the result of an accident. Friends said that he had been fearful for some time that he was going to have to have the other leg amputated. For the last several years, he had also been subject to a nervous disorder which made it necessary to have slight operations on his head at regular intervals. It is believed that brooding over ailments caused him to commit suicide.

Differing from his distinguished fellow New Yorker in Albany, Mr. Stimson's concern is for the forgotten Manchuria—Virginia Pilot.

It must be admitted that Mr. Stimson is the greatest secretary of state we ever had for making Japan mad.—Grand Rapids Press.

After shooting her husband, a Chicago woman sobbed at his grave: "I am going to miss him." She did not the first time.—Weston Leader.

All Set For Swell Funeral But 'Dead' Man Is Not Suited

New York, Oct. 1.—Daniel Sullivan would have been buried one day last week—and a grand affair it would have been, with deluxe funeral cars and the undertaker wearing snappy white gloves and his best frock coat—except for one thing. Daniel wasn't dead.

He seemed as sorry about everything as did the others who had gone to considerable trouble to put him properly away. "Go right on thinking I'm dead," he told his young wife, Madeline. "It's okay by me."
Mrs. Sullivan had about decided it was okay by her, too; that the thing to do was to get a divorce or annulment and to tell the undertaker she was sorry she brought the matter up.

She explained that Daniel left home in July remarking, "Well, Babe, I'll be seeing you." He called her Babe.
He didn't return. Mrs. Sullivan was much concerned, but there was nothing she could do about it.

This week she read that "Daniel Sullivan" had drowned and that his body was being held at the morgue.
She identified it as the body of her Daniel. There was even a note in the man's clothes: "Dear Babe, I'm lonesome, goodby."

She sent a mortician to give Daniel a funeral he could be proud of. Then she thought some of his friends would want to know, so she dropped around to West Broadway and Chamber street, which was an intersection much favored by Daniel when he was alive and going places.
As she approached the spot she came face to face with—Daniel. "You're dead!" she exclaimed. "You're cuckoo," retorted Daniel. "Give me three dollars."
"I'll give you the air," said Mrs. Sullivan.

Friends of the family were informed there would be no funeral.
Germany has ordered another "pocket battleship." The word "pocket" is supposed to denote the cruiser's size, but it is a word that intrigues us just the same.

Men won't keep their monopoly of the hatless fall. The dinky little things women wear indicate that their dear creatures are weaning themselves.

But if there are no perfect people, what becomes of the children of those who write books on the art of child training?

Spectacular Rescue of "Flying Family"

Kill Strange Bird In Blacksburg Area

Thought Eagle By Some But Called Fish Hawk By Alexander.

Gaffney Ledger.
A bird resembling an eagle and thought by some who saw it to be an eagle, was exhibited here Saturday by L. R. Ligon, of the Blacksburg star route. The bird, killed Saturday morning by Mr. Ligon, had a wing spread of 5 feet and 8 inches and weighed four pounds.

T. J. Alexander, well known Gaffney contractor who lived at Gastonia, N. C., for a time several years ago, who inspected the bird called it a fish hawk. Mr. Alexander said:
"The unknown fowl Mr. Ligon was exhibiting on the streets here must have been a fish hawk. I was talking with one of the managers of the Gastonia pumping station and described the fowl to him. He said it was a fish hawk. They have a lake of fifty or more acres and have it stocked with fish, and the hawks are frequent visitors.

They kill one occasionally. The largest one they killed, he said, measured five feet nine inches from tip to tip. They carry off a three or four-pound fish. When one is hungry he gets pretty tame until he gets his fish."

Gaffney Lady Finds A Baby Tarantula

Spider Runs Out From Bananas As Mrs. Patrick Prepares Pudding.

Gaffney.—While preparing some bananas with which she intended to make a pudding Sunday, Mrs. Lloyd Patrick was startled to see a baby tarantula run out from the fruit on to a knife she had in her hand. She screamed and shook the spider to the floor, where it was captured by her husband who put a glass jar over it.

Mr. Patrick, assistant to J. L. Campbell, receiver of the First National bank, had the little tarantula on display in a glass jar yesterday.
Mr. Patrick said he purchased some bananas in a local store and took them home Saturday night. The tarantula must have been in the package.

Several large tarantulas have been found in bananas here in recent months. One was captured at Foster, Westbrook's store on Cherokee avenue and another at Copeland and company on Grand street.

Rock Hill Building Shows Big Increase

Rock Hill, S. C., Oct. 5.—The greatest number of dwellings in many years to be under construction in Rock Hill over a 30-day period was reported today by Fire Chief T. O. Flowers in giving September building permit totals as $30,665 for new projects and $1,905 for repair jobs. The permits included four new dwellings and two more have been started. A storehouse for fertilizer and cotton is also included. The September total was $12,550.

Hunting Season Now On; Bird Season To Open November 20

Raleigh.—Woods of North Carolina will once more resound with the baying of hounds as the season for hunting opossums and raccoons with dogs and guns opened this month, the department of conservation and development said.

Trapping season, however, it was pointed out, will not open until 45 days later on November 15. Fur-bearing animals which may be taken with traps beginning with the middle of the eleventh month include mink, muskrat, otter, raccoon and opossum.

The season for hunting opossums and raccoons with dog and gun will be the third in the series of seasons which have opened this fall. The first was for squirrels, doves, rails and gallinules (except coon) on September 1.

Fifteen days after the hunting lid was pried off the first open periods deer season began in Eastern North Carolina on September 15, but deer season will not be open in Western North Carolina until November 1.

Beaver hunting begins today throughout the state and extends

Dr. Wall In Meeting In Chester, S. C.

Chester (S. C.) Reporter.

Special services at the First Baptist church, which began Sunday with strong evangelistic sermons of the pastor, Rev. M. L. Banister, are continuing with preaching every morning at ten o'clock and each night at seven-thirty by Dr. Zeno Wall, of Shelby, N. C., who arrived here Monday afternoon.
