Federal Probe to Rake Ruins of Insull Utilities Empire

Uncle Sam Seeks "Why 2" of Debacle That Cost Investors in Titanic Power Corporations Over Billion Dollars.

SAMUEL INSULL ATTY GEN MITCHELL

With United States Attorney General Mitchell's probe digging in the debris of the once mighty utilities empire of Samuel Insull, the mystery that caused the greatest single financial debacle in American history seems on the way to a solution. The Federal authorities are taking a hand in the case in an attempt to determine whether criminal respo hand in the case in an attempt to determine whether criminal responsi-bility exists for the great collapse. To this end, it is expected that the first step in the investigation will be to effect the return of the Insull brothers to the United States. Samuel Insull, founder and head of the power empire, is now in Paris, where he subsists on a pension of $18,000 awarded him by three of the companies he once controlled. Martin Insull, the brother, is in Canada. Samuel Insull came to the United States fifty-one years ago from his native England as the secretary of Thomas A. Edison. For eleven years he worked with the inventor, aiding in the formation of many of the companies that bear the Edison name. He struck out on his own when, through Edison's influence, he became president of the Chicago Edison Company. His genius for organiza-tion was such that he was credited with the Midas touch. Everything he touched seemed to turn to gold, and at one time his personal fortune was estimated at $100,000,000. Now the mighty pyramid he built is in ruins and at 73 he is an exile, a voluntary one, it is true, with only dreams of greatness to look back upon
