Mr. Brooks had been in declining health for several years, but was able to be up all of the time until a few paralysis 11 years ago, then another about three months ago. It is thought that he had another stroke just before his death and his suffering was intense.

Newark Speech Probably Did Not religious issue into the campaign at Newark may be considered separately, but it was good medicine inthe section to which Al has confined his campaign

Religious Issue. The backbone of Smith's great personal following in the states on the north Atlantic seaboard is composed of devoted Irish Catholics who wailed at the defeat of their hero by the "Ku Kluxers" at Madison Square Garden in 1924, who bitterly resented the large anti-Catholic vote against Smith in 1928 and who believed-perhaps correctly enough-that Smith would have been renominated in 1932 had he been a Protestant.

William G. McAdoo's part in Roosevelt's nomination helped foster the feeling that Smith at Chicago had again been the victim of the "Kluxers." In appealing to such audiences, it was good politics for Al to remind them of the use made of the religious issue by Republicans in 1928 and so divert the flow of their resentment

Although his Newark speech gave many Democrats an acute pain, the Boston effort showed Smith at his little ing to do for the ticket. But since best-at the height of his effective-
