NEWSPAPERS

Some months ago this corner ran that bewhiskered riddle, "Why is a woman like a new paper?"

The stereotyped answer is: "Because every man should have one of his own and not run after his neighbor's." But in recent weeks, newspaper readers here and there over the country have supplied a number of new answers. Perhaps you will be interested and perhaps you will not, but here are a few "Because they both tell all they know." (That's our'n.)

"Because a woman wants to know all the news and tell us all she "Because both are tactful, desirable, interesting and indispensable."

"Because they have forms, and it is necessary to lock them up if you want to go to press.'

"Because they have bold face types."

"Because they are easy to read."

"Because they are well worth looking over."

"Because back numbers are not in demand."

"Because they are not afraid to speak their minds." "Because if they know anything they usually tell it."

"Because they always have the last word."

"Because they carry the news wherever they go." "Because they have a great deal of influence."

"You may often disagree with them but you can't get along without

Carter Glass Learned Finance In Hard School of Experience

THE CLEVELAND STAR

Virginia Senator, Former Secretary of the Treasury and Mentioned as Next Holder of That Post, Is One of Nation's Foremost Banking Authorities.

When appointed to the Banking and Currency Committee on making his debut in Congress, in 1902, Carter Glass of Virginia frankly confessed that he didn't know anything about banking, but announced his determination to learn. How well he succeeded may be gauged from the mination to learn. How well he succeeded may be gauged from the fact that he is today regarded as one of the country's foremost authorities on national and international finance. From a humble Representative member of the banking committee he rose rapidly to the chairmanship of that body, and climaxed his financial education in 1918 by accepting the portfolio of Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinet of President Wilson. Among other things, Senator Glass is the father of the Federal Reserve Act, one of the achievements of which he is justly accepted the resigned from the sphinet in 1920 to accept an appointment proud. He resigned from the cabinet in 1920 to accept an appointment as U. S. Senater by the Governor of Virginia. He was re-elected in 1926 and again in 1930. Today, despite his 74 years, Senator Glass is as fiery and active on the Senate floor as he was when he first entered the halls of Congress. During the recent election campaign he flatly contradicted President Hoover and Secretary Mills when they stated publications. licly that the United States was at one time within two weeks of being driven off the gold standard during the economic crisis. The Virginia Senator, prominently mentioned as next Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinet of President-elect Roosevelt, is a dry, but favors resubmission. He also is an advocate of revision of the foreign war debts.

Roosevelt Favors Another Debt Plan

President - Elect Thinks Nations Should Be Consulted Separately.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 20.-President elect Roosevelt indicated Monday night he believed debt negotiations with individual nations can be best carried out by a special representative of the President rather than by a commission or a board.

Mr. Roosevelt, in expressing this view, after being informed that President Hoover had moved toward creation of a bipartisan board to go into the matter of debts, disarmaments and the general world economic situation, let it be known also the position of "direct dealing" he outlined for debt negotiations remains unchanged.

"Have you received any word about himself, a self centered perfrom Mr. Hoover on his newest pro- son. posal?" the governor was asked. "I cannot tell you," he replied, 'obviously that would have to come from the White House."

In Controversial Stage. Roosevelt was represented as believing that the debt problem should be considered separately instead of by a group that also would have on its agenda the question of disarmaments and economic rehabilitation.

to feel that the war debt negotiations are in but a controversial stage, a stage that could not possibly be brought to a conclusion before he assumes office March 4.

They were convinced also that a policy of bargaining for the best possible terms could be carried out with a great deal more success by an individual rather than through the formality of a conference room.
