Behind The Scenes In Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL. Hollywood—There'll be no conviviality between Max Baer and the giant Primo Carnera when the two behemoths of boxing gather on the same lot to make a picture. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is fitting up a dressing room for Carnera at the far end of the lot from Baer's. On the set they'll have individual portable dressing rooms.

The arrangement suits Baer perfectly. In typically cocky fashion, he says: "When Carnera gets here, he can stay on his side of the lot and I'll stay on mine. It isn't that I have anything against Carnera. I've only seen him once and that was when he fought Sharkey, but some time soon he and I are going to fight it out for the championship and I want to have no prejudice one way or another when we meet in the ring. I don't believe in rival fighters being pals anyway."

And is Hollywood hoping that either Max or Primo will let one fly in their mock battle? Nancy Carroll told it to me the other night at the Colony Club and I think it's a swell story.

About the married man who'd gotten swacked with the boys and was suffering from a guilty conscience. He walked into his wife's bedroom very dignified and said: "Honey, I've been out with the gang playing poker. We didn't realize it was so late but we only had a few drinks. It's been a quiet evening."

Came a pause and his wife sweetly replied: "All right, dear, put down your umbrella and come to bed."

Never try to rib Ernst Lubitsch. Ask Jeanette MacDonald. Meeting Ernst after her return from Europe, she began to tell him about her part in "The Cat and the Fiddle". Only, in a spirit of fun, she substituted most of the situations from Ernst's current picture, "Design for Living". The rotund director got so excited he almost swallowed his cigar. That night he investigated and discovered the hoax. Then he called up Jeanette, told her the laugh was on him but that he had read the real script of "The Cat and the Fiddle" and for her to refuse to play the part—that it would ruin her. Jeanette then went up in the air. It took plenty of persuasion and explanation before she saw the joke.

Here's something to reduce swell-heads. Without having a single picture released, Mary Howard (she's Will Rogers' daughter) is getting more fan mail than any other star on the Fox lot.

Plant Fall Crops For Dairy Cattle

Need Will Be Urged For Temporary Pastures Next Spring. Grain Mixture Suggested.

(By Extension Department)

The short hay crop occasioned by the continued dry weather in North Carolina this past summer means that an additional acreage should be planted to winter-growing crops this fall.

"The need for temporary pastures next spring on most North Carolina dairy farms will be urgent," declares John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at State College. "The supplies of hay on most of these farms will be exhausted by February or March, especially where there are no silos and a few cows are kept for cream production. Usually when the supply of hay is exhausted the cows are turned on the permanent pastures whether there is anything to eat on them or not. Neither is the condition of the soil considered. This means that the cows damage the sod and get little nutrition from the early grasses."

If temporary grazing is provided through March and part of April, the cows may be kept off the permanent pasture until the grass has made a desirable growth and the soil is dry enough to prevent damage to the sod from trampling.

Arey says most any of the small grains might be used to supply this temporary grazing; but, a mixture composed of several will give better grazing than any one used alone. One good mixture is two bushels of Abruzzi rye and 15 pounds of crimson clover an acre. Another which he highly recommends consists of one bushel of Abruzzi rye, one bushel of beardless wheat, one bushel of beardless barley and 10 pounds of crimson clover. The first mixture should be planted during the latter part of August and up until September 15 while the second mixture should be planted between September 15 and October 15.

Heavy seeding and a fertile soil are necessary for best results in securing spring grazing. Two tons of green limestone per acre with 400 and 500 pounds of fertilizer applied at seeding will give best results.

Estimate Timber Before Selling It

Extension Department Says Some Farmers Sell Their Timber Without Knowing Value.

(Extension Department)

Selling timber stands by guess has been disastrous to many a landowner in North Carolina.

"I know of one farmer in Caswell County who sold $10,000 worth of timber for $1,500 and another man in Randolph County who sold $8,000 worth for $2,000," says R. W. Graeber, extension forester at State College. "These two cases may appear to be exaggerated but they are true. Even worse cases have been reported. The trouble is that these men did not know the true stand of timber on their woodlands and sold by guess."

Mr. Graeber has been trying to offset such losses to farmers by holding a number of timber estimating demonstrations in various parts of the State. Such meetings were recently held in Vance, Yadkin and Wilkes counties. Here the men attending the meetings were given log rules and asked to measure trees and to figure the stand of timber on a given area. There are several of these log rules but the two principal ones used in North Carolina are the Doyle and Scribner. Sometimes the use of these rules will not give accurate results but it is better than guess work.

Owners of timber land can avoid heavy losses in selling their standing trees if they will use the "tree scale" stick, measuring the diameter and heights of trees of salable size and then reading the volume of the trees in board feet of lumber. The sticks are simple to understand and are sold in sets at a small price. Graeber says.

Those who are doubtful about the amount of timber in a given area and are not able to measure it, should consult with their county farm agent before selling the timber by guess, he says.
