Princes Credited With British Trade Boom

Selection of the Duke of Gloucester, his third son, by King George to open the centenary celebrations at Melbourne, Australia, and to carry out the program originally scheduled for his brother, Prince George, goes to prove that the life of a royal salesman is not so easy as one might imagine. Prince George, who returned from a three-month tour of South Africa in the interests of British trade, recently underwent such a strain on the trip that it was thought inadvisable for him to make the Australian tour. With his brother, the Prince of Wales, Prince George is credited with the success of the "Buy British" campaign, which is said to be pulling Britain out of the depression. The Australian trip, during which he will visit the Fiji Islands and New Zealand to boost British products, is the first venture of the Duke of Gloucester as a "salesman."
