Notes And News From Here And There About Cleveland County People You Know

ZON ROBINSON, the brilliant popular young prospective junior college professor of Mooresboro is read-headed and has never voted. In fact, it was only recently that he was old enough to vote. He finished college at 20, getting a "magna cum laude" and having held assistantships in two departments at Wake Forest and being president of the Euzelian Literary society, two or three other organizations and being elected to Ovidian Bough, the honor organization of the college. Now he is dean of men and social science teacher at Campbell college. Congrats, my lad.

SIGNATURES and autographs of the notable always have an attraction for a lot of people. There are dozens of people here in town who would like to have the personal scratch of Maxie Baer, Lou Gehrig and others in the spotlighted sphere of fame. Recently we mentioned some one having the autograph of Caroline Miller, Pulitzer prize novelist. Giles Shytle goes him one better—he has a personal letter from the lady. No questions, please!

SHELBY SALESMEN are a wide awake bunch of fellows who are always getting ahead of the other fellow with new ideas. The latest on this group of knights of the road is how they manage all the "salesman jokes." It is a well known fact that they all have their line of jokes. Too, practically all of them know the others' jokes. Still further, they have little time for telling them in their brief little "tete-a-tetes" in the hotel lobby. So they are gravely considering getting out a catalogue—with all the jokes listed and numbered.

"Turn to No. 13, ol' boy." Ha, ha, that's a good one!

JOHN B. WRIGHT, an up-country man, says the only thing that makes him think he might be getting up in years is the fact that he knows a man younger than he is who has four or five great grandchildren, some of 'em big enough to go to school. He takes consolation in the fact that a man is just as old as he feels. Incidentally, he is a good farmer, likes cats-for pets and is an old-time lasses maker.

MOBANTON SENDS the story of a man in the insane asylum there who was promised freedom in about three weeks. Deciding to write home he procured a stamp and started to put it on a letter. He thought he placed it on well but there was a cock-roach under it and when he saw the stamp go zig-zag across the room and disappear in a crack, he exclaimed "Three weeks nothing, I want to be out of this place in three years!"

A. W. BONDURANT assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern railway system with offices in Charlotte, was a visitor in Shelby the other day, and related an interesting story concerning the cattle shipped to North Carolina from the drought-afflicted states. Mr. Bondurant says that while the almost-starved cattle are being shipped, they are fed a limited and regulated amount of food, and given a certain amount of water to drink, in order that they might not injure themselves by eating too heavily. But when time comes for the unloading, the shippers have a job on their hands because the cows, accustomed to parched, dry prairies in past months get their first glimpse of fresh, green grass and a general stampede to get to it. He says that the stampeding cattle give trouble at every unloading, and that they furnish one of the biggest inconveniences to the shippers that they have experienced in history.

THE WORLD'S FAIR holds a peculiar attraction for Cleveland county and Shelby folks. Fully sixty persons from this county were in Chicago last week, all of them drawn by the attractions of the greatest exposition in the history of the world. Some of them went through the auspices of the Cleveland Star, and others paid their own expenses. But we venture to state that no other county of the same size and population and located the same distance from Chicago has furnished a similar number of visitors during the two years of the exposition.

WHEN IT COMES to finishing Bridgewater or Lake James seems to be stealing the show from other neighboring fishing haunts. Numerous are the Shelby men who leave here on the week-end to spend a Saturday night hooking catfish in the crystal-clear waters of the large artificial lake in Western North Carolina. The Canal Bridge, which incidentally spans a canal joining two smaller lakes which together make up Greater Bridgewater, is crowded every night with fishermen, among whom may be found Hugh Miller, Shorty Long, Dean Duncan, DeWitt Quinn, Willis McMurry, Mason Carroll, Aaro Quinn, Jack Dover and many others.

perience is Robert L. Luckie at Bostic, over in Rutherford. Mr. Luckie and his wife passed through Shelby last week enroute to Pittsburgh to attend the Spanish-American War veterans reunion. Mr. Luckie was born in Staunton, Va. in the same block where Woodrow Wilson was born. As a youngster he joined the Marines and was on the Battleship Texas when it went to the rescue of the Maine, sunk in the harbor of Havana back in '98. Harrowing tales of this experience can be related by Mr. Luckie when you question him. After his Marine service, he entered the railway mail service. When the Clinchfield railroad was completed, he was handling mail on the first passenger train. He bought property at Bostic and when he retired after 36 years of service, decided to remain at Bostic.

HERE AND THERE. A cabbage truck hit Carl Webb's Packard in the mountains the other day. Contractors are beginning today to pave the short strip of road from highway No. 20 down to Bostic in Rutherford county. Craig Hartgrove has had ample time to get to Shelby from Washington on his bicycle. Hundreds of cattle from the drought area are corralled in a wired enclosure at Monroe. The Seaboard brought in the cattle for distribution to grazing lands in the state. Styles and customs at funerals are changing. No longer does an undertaker furnish the active pall bearers with hot gloves to wear.

Boiling Springs Bride Is Honored

Old Man Depression received a terrible blow when B. G. Beason, of Boiling Springs, decided that it could be licked with sandwiches.

Out of a job, a family to support, and with a lone $50 cash and credit to begin with, Mr. Beason opened a sandwich shop in the little junior college town and in little more than six years his shop has metamorphosed into the Cleveland Sandwich company, working more than a dozen employees, making each day more than 4000 sandwiches of some fifteen varieties, which are eaten with relish by customers in a territory of more than a fifty mile radius.

A Spreading Business. A visit to the sandwich shop will convince the most skeptical that an idea plus management and work will produce death blows to a depression. An array of modern equipment including polished oil stoves, electrically driven food choppers, bread slicers and mixers, and a dozen other instruments of the manager's own invention give evidence of just how thousands of wholesome spreads are prepared each day.

Manager Beason states that from the very beginning, he adopted service and quality as twin trademarks for his business. With four other men in the field all the time he furnishes the service, and to Miss Lou Moore, dietitian and his assistant since the beginning of the project, goes credit for the quality. Miss Moore directs the activity of some eight or ten young ladies, and women of the community as they prepare and mix food, build the sandwiches and wrap them in waxed paper or cellophane and give them proper labels.

Barbecue Most Popular. Barbecue hash, declares Miss Moore, is the most popular article in the entire line of sandwiches. It is the pride of the company, the recipe being Miss Moore's invention, and its consumption doubles that of the once over-popular ham. However, as close seconds, thirds, or fourths come chicken salad, deviled egg, straight barbecue and pimento cheese. Other popular numbers are roast pork, ham and pickle, a French, a special and a baby club.

Chuckling at the question of loss in overhead in having to take back unsold sandwiches every day, manager Beason states that such a problem was the least of his troubles. A large pen of porkers fairly bristle economy as they eat up the scraps and left-overs and in turn present themselves for more barbecue and ham sandwiches.

Carrying out the economy idea still further the company has in connection with the making of sandwiches installed a general stock of merchandise for which country produce such as eggs, chickens, butter, and vegetables are accepted as cash. These products are then used or sold as needed.

Straight from the heart of old Castile, came the plans, the scaled models, and the ideas for the Spanish Village, called by many the most attractive of the dozen and more foreign villages which are featured at the Chicago World's Fair. Like a trip to old Madrid, a visit to the Spanish Village confirms the romantic notions surrounding Spain that are associated with this country in the minds of most people.
