

Prison Mule Won't Plow Unless Driver Wears Convict Stripes

RALEIGH, Oct. 12.—A mule that refuses to plow for any driver that does not wear stripes is owned by the prison division of the State Highway and Public works commission, according to Bernard Crocker of the purchase and supply department of the prison division.

This mule has been at Camp Polk for 15 years or more, where virtually all the prisoners wear the prison stripes. But because the mule was getting old and not able to do heavy work at the Camp Polk farm, he was recently transferred to the Granville county camp for misdemeanants near Oxford, where the short term prisoners are not required to wear stripes.

"When they took the mule out and tried to make him plow, he would not budge," Crocker said. "Finally, some one thought the reason might be because the driver

The main topics of interest will be the matter of further union of Lutheran bodies, theological education, stewardship, missions, evangelism and the moral and social order. The Lutheran pulpit will be supplied on this coming Sunday by Seminary Student, Lamar Rhyne of Kings Mountain.

PRESIDENT MOVES TO END ALLEGED STRETCHOUT EVILS

Issues Executive Order Creating Three Boards To Probe Work Assignments.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—President Roosevelt on Tuesday night struck at the heart of one of the most troublesome barriers to peace in the mighty textile industry—the "stretchout."

He issued four executive orders creating, under the textile labor relations board, three boards under a common chairman to investigate work load assignments in the cotton, silk and wool mills.

The boards are ordered to make recommendations to the president no later than January 1, 1935, for a permanent plan for regulation of the work load in the respective industries.

These recommendations, one executive order states, unless some good cause is shown to the contrary, shall include, among other provisions, substantially the following principles:

1. No employer shall increase the work assignments on any class of work until he has secured authorization therefor from the district impartial chairman (appointed by the textile work assignment board) of the district in which the mill operates.

2. The district chairman, on petition by the representatives of any employees affected, shall investigate the justifiability of existing labor assignments, and if he finds any assignment involves excessive efforts by the workers, shall require the employer to reduce such assignment.

3. Decisions of the district chairman rendered under the above provisions shall be subject to appeal to the textile work assignment board, whose decision shall be final.

Extension of work assignments may not be ordered by the impartial chairman until notice has been served upon employees affected and then only after six weeks has elapsed since the filing by the employer of a petition setting out his plans with the chairman and representatives of the employees.

More Trouble for Father-in-Law

Troubles of Roger E. Baker, inset, 39-year-old baseball league owner and night club operator of Newton, Mass., who has been arrested on a charge of pilfering money from his former employes, have been multiplied by the action of Mrs. Marie Douzane Baker, above, Baker's daughter-in-law, in filing suit against him for $100,000. Baker, who allegedly has confessed to stealing $100,000 from a leather firm where he once was employed, was accused by the woman of failing to keep his promise to settle $50,000 on her when she married his son.

Mars Hill College Has Founders Day

MARS HILL, Oct. 16.—The world must be built around human beings, and society with its institutions should be created and operated for the benefit of individuals, Dr. William Preston Few, president of Duke university said Monday morning in delivering the Founders day address at Mars Hill college.

and other institutions. Many educational institutions, he said, are older than the nations which they serve. He expressed approval of the effort of Mars Hill to give individual attention to students, to give morality religious sanction, to teach people to live together, to teach think well of each other in such a way to prepare them for a worldwide brotherhood of understanding.

Discovery of a common basic substance in blood and chlorophyll supports the contention by some scientists that animals and plants sprang from the same ancestry.
