Upswing In Business Expected To Obviate New Tax Necessity

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The administration let congress know yesterday it was counting on an upturn in business to obviate the need for new taxes next year.

Members of the house ways and means and senate finance committees, calling on President Roosevelt today to learn his ideas on the forthcoming session, came away with this thought.

New taxes, they said after their White House call, would be deterrent to what government officials are coming to look upon as a decided upturn in economic conditions.

It was indicated, however, that the treasury would ask for the continuance of nuisance taxes expiring next June 30, a levy which brings in around $460,000,000 annually.

Famous University Songs Written By Plato And Robert L. Durham

Of special interest to Shelby and Cleveland county alumni will be the readings by Mrs. C. E. Rankin at the Duke day dinner of "The Bells of Trinity" written by Plato T. Durham of the class of '95, and "O Duke, Alma Mater," written by Robert Lee Durham of the class of '21, and "Dedicated to One Beloved of the Generations, Robert Lee Flowers." These distinguished sons of Duke were first sons of Shelby.

The poems follow:
The Bells of Trinity
When, weary on the storm-swept hills,
I hush the climber's challenge-songs,
And love the dreamy light that fills
The lotus-blooming vales of wrong,
A warning cry rings out to me—
The deep, stern Bells of Trinity.

When, bleeding on the battlefield
Where Right's uplifting banners go,
My coward soul would cry "I yield,"
And bend before the ancient foe,
A bugle-song enheartens me—
The clear, brave Bells of Trinity.

When, standing where the harvest die,
And, scoring falsehood's hissing whips,
I dare to own my soul and cry
The Truth, e'en though with bleeding lips,
A song of triumph rings to me—
The proud, free Bells of Trinity.

When, kneeling desolate and lone
Within the ancient garden dim,
I pay the price to them unknown
Who have not dared to watch with

Him,
A benediction breathes to me—
The sweet, grave Bells of Trinity.

When far my pathway lies along
The moorland of the after years,
When Life sings low her evening song
And all the west a glory wears,
Then ring your Vesper Song to me,
O Sunset Bells of Trinity.

O Duke, Alma Mater
O Duke, Alma Mater, how restful thy shades,
Thy green woodland coverts, they warm sunlit glades;
The Good Earth enrobes thee with life ever new,
In beauty presents thee to Heav'n's gold and blue;

In majesty's grace roll thy wide boulevards;
The strength of the hills forms thy angles and yards;
O Duke, Alma Mater, in age—as in youth—
May God hold thee steadfast in Courage and Truth.

O Duke, Alma Mater, the Beauty and Grace
And Strength of Thy Spirit illumine thy face;
In long generations thy children will come,
To love and to trust thee, and follow thee home
From bondage in darkness to Lands of Desire—
Thy Mother Soul leading a Pillar of Fire:

O Duke, Alma Mater, in age—as in youth—
May God hold thee steadfast in Courage and Truth
