2 Housebreakings, 1 Store Robbery, Mark Week End

Get Gum And Candy From Produce Co.

Police Arrest Three; Houses Ransacked, But Little Of Value Is Stolen.

A notable lull in lawbreaking, which had been giving Shelby policemen a rest since the last term of Superior court posted so many literal warnings, was shattered over the week-end.

Hoisting of the jug, housebreaking and stealing chewing gum were the police blotter features of a humid week-end.

Nine Drunks

Chief Wilkins reported nine arrests for d. & d.—drunk and disorderly, whereas for several months the records have been comparatively free of such notations. The offenders will be tried in night sessions of recorder's court.

Two homes were entered. Gordon Dudley's house in Beaumont Terrace was robbed of two pistols and a quart of milk, after all the rooms had been ransacked, and Mrs. Thomas B. Morgan's home at 431 Oakland Drive was searched by thieves. Nothing of value was taken.

Get Store Thieves

In the meantime, Officers Stamey and Hardin were solving the robbery of the Carolina Fruit and Produce company, in which 200 cartons of chewing gum and a quantity of candy, valued all told at $200, were stolen.

They arrested Robert Lemmons, Sam Fiddler and Ray Green, and recovered part of the stolen goods in a room occupied by Lemmons and Fiddler.

The robbers entered the store through a window and departed through the basement.

Incidentally, Chief Wilkins is working on a tip which, he believed, may lead to the arrest of storekeepers who have been making a practise of purchasing goods known to have been stolen.

Methodist Church School Is Opened

The Vacation Church school at Central Methodist church began this morning at nine o'clock with an enrollment of 23 in the junior department, 41 in the primary, and 14 in the beginner.

The juniors are studying "The Land Where Jesus Lived" and we hope to have with us Friday, Rev. W. L. Hutchins of Concord, who has traveled in the Holy Land. He will tell of his experiences and show a moving picture. The primaries are studying "Learning About Our Church" and are planning many worthwhile experiences and activities. The beginners are playing together as they learn to live and share. They are thinking about "Home" and how they can help in those homes.

All the children who have not enrolled are given a cordial invitation to do so as soon as possible.

Workmen today began construction of a culvert at West Warren street as part of the paving project for Lovers Lane, which was approved several weeks ago for surfacing.

Morning Cotton LETTER

NEW YORK, May 20.—Realizing moderate hedging sales brought about the setback on Saturday. Domestic spinners buy on the setback but apparently are not disposed to follow the advances for the time being. Operations on Saturday indicated that additional sales of the actual are being made from the concentrated holdings. The Far East has been a rather constant buyer of the near months. Inflationary ideas evidently persist and we see little likelihood of any important recession for the present. Believe that purchases made on the easy spots will prove profitable. E. A. Pierce & Co.

Cooler Tuesday

Weather forecast for North Carolina: Cloudy, probably occasional light showers Monday; Tuesday, showers, slightly cooler in the interior.

THE MARKETS
Cotton, spot 12 1/2 to 13 1/4
Cotton seed, car, ton $40.00
Cotton seed, wagon, ton $37.00

Governor Eager To Avoid Special Assembly Session

Ehringhaus Tries To Avoid Expedient

Sentiment Revealed In Letter To Senators And Congressmen On Unemployment.

(Special to The Star.)
RALEIGH, May 20.—Governor Ehringhaus, as was generally believed, is seeking to avoid a special session of the general assembly.

This is revealed in a letter written to the North Carolina senators and representatives in congress, with enclosure of the enabling act passed by the general assembly on its closing day which gives the governor and council of state authority to set up a plan for unemployment insurance in any of the state departments.

Governor Ehringhaus asks the national legislators to watch legislation in congress with a view of enactments which will not involve appropriations and not require a special session of the N. C. general assembly to pass acts to conform to the national legislation. This national legislation on unemployment insurance was expected earlier, before the N. C. assembly adjourned but was not reached, and the last-day enabling act was passed with the hope that it would be sufficient to meet the federal requirements.

Letters Pour In To Hoey Office

Clyde R. Hoey, who last week announced his candidacy for governor, was busy this week-end in an effort to answer personally as soon as possible the hundreds of congratulatory letters he is receiving daily.

Letters and telegrams have been arriving all week, in chain-letter proportions. Some of them are from personal friends, many are from lawyers, business men, ministers who are not acquainted with Mr. Hoey, pledging their support.

Virtually all of them praised the tenor of his announcement, which set forth a platform of social security, more pay for teachers, interest in youth, and old age pensions.

As they turned into East Marion street, the door swung open and they were tossed out, but she suffered a head injury, possibly a fractured skull. Mother and child are in the Shelby hospital.

Cops To Ignore N. C. Speed Laws-- But Will Arrest Reckless Drivers

North Carolina highway patrolmen won't arrest you for speeding after today, Corporal H. A. Greenway said this morning.

Does this mean you can tune up the old car and go as fast as you like, anywhere? It does not.

It means, as a matter of fact, that you'd better be more careful than ever. It means that highway patrolmen, according to an official

Gov. Talmadge On Speaking Tour

Governor Eugene Talmadge

Among the most colorful figures on the American political scene today is Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia. Now engaged in a speaking tour which takes him through the south, east and midwest, Georgia's governor has become a nationally known figure, particularly because of his outspoken attack on many phases of the New Deal. Talmadge is a bitter opponent of the NRA and cotton processing tax. He has fought for lower utility rates and favors minimum participation of government in industry and private enterprise. Now serving his second term as governor, Talmadge is mentioned as a possible third party presidential candidate next year, but is believed to be pointing his plans toward the senate.

Dusty Highway 18 Leads To South Carolina Liquor

Gaffney Liquor Store To Open Monday, May 27; Rumor Of Whiskey Sales At State Line Are Denied

Reports that South Carolina liquor sellers were preparing to open a whiskey store on Highway 18, just inside their own state line, six miles from Shelby, were denied this morning by owners of property in that section—but the rumor gave a dampish hint about the kind of traffic that may be expected on that intra-state road beginning Monday, May 27.

That's the date our sister Carolina goes wet. Three or four liquor stores will open in Gaffney. Many more will offer giggle-water in Spartanburg, just 50 miles from Shelby. North Carolina moonshiners, secure for years in their monopoly on alcohol, see a serious threat to business.

It Looks Simple

With North Carolina's own liquor laws in such embarrassed confusion as the legislature virtually erased the Turlington Act in a last-minute splash, fetching liquor from

South Carolina appears to be as comparatively simple as putting your foot on the rail and calling for a Tom Collins.

Dusty No. 18, from Virginia's edge, through Morganton and Shelby to the wet line to the south bids fair to become a notable highway of joy and spirits.

Cherokee county residents grinned wisely when asked about the liquor question this morning. They said it looked as if they will complete

Today came a letter from C. B. Manford, coordinator for the department of agriculture, in reply to this appeal.

He said the Cleveland project would get full consideration. He said for the county to take it up with Dr. J. H. Stallings.

Corporate Excess Is Discarded, City And County To Lose $3,000

Mayor S. A. McMurry and County Auditor McKinney, who keeps wary eyes on Shelby and Cleveland revenue sources, saw $3,000 skip to nowhere as they poured over a legal document that only two Philadelphia lawyers could translate.

The document—to put it into more or less understandable terms—is the North Carolina Machinery act, which doesn't have anything at all to do with harvesting apparatus or sewing machines. In this act was a section called 603, which had to do with corporate excess. And

Pat's Bonus

The bonus might mean cash to veterans, but to Representative Wright Patman of Texas, it means a lot of work answering mail. Mopping his brow, the congressman is shown with some of the mail that arrived at his office, praising and criticizing the contentious bill.

N. C. Delegation Backs Up NRA

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The entire Tar Heel delegation in congress will stand behind the President in asking an extension of the National Recovery act, it was revealed today when a casual poll of the members was made.

The Senate has passed the bill without a roll call, extending the life of the Blue Eagle until March 1, of next year, and is standing uncompromisingly for that date. Meanwhile, Representative F. L. Doughton today convenes the House Ways and Means committee to conduct hearings on his bill to extend the act for another two years. The bill applies the provisions of the N.R.A. only to goods in interstate commerce, retains the 7-A or collective bargaining clause, minimum wages and maximum hours sections, and also the child labor clause, and declares that no price-fixing shall take place except on certain products.

As the situation is now unfolded, the Senate has the whip and can demand almost anything desired of the House.
