TOUNG, inexperienced in business and financial affairs, how will your son react if suddenly called upon to manage the estate you.plan to leave him?

By creating a trust under your will, you can accustom him to responsibility gradually. You can provide him with income paid, periodically. And at any predetermined age you can arrange for him to have complete control of principal, or the principal may be paid to him in definite installments at stated intervals, which you decide on, or which you may leave to the discretion of your trustee.

By naming this Trust Institution as executor and trustee under your will, you give him the benefit of the group judgment of men long experienced in trust work-able and willing, besides, to advise with him on, personal matters and to help him condition himself for the management of money.
