Then there is Smiling Bobby Sall, the Paterson, N. J. boy, who began his career as a tonsorial expert. Bob toiled for three years in his father's barber shop before succumbing to the lure of the roaring road. He is a typical 1935 American—one-half Dutch, one-half Italian.

Sall, whose real monicker is Robert Saldutti, qualified one of the four new Ford cars in the 1935 renewal of the Indianapolis "500!" cognized champion of the East in 1933, Bob is a foremost contender for 1935 speed honors. He chauffeurs a McDowell.

Tousle-haired Vern Orenduff, the sun-tanned Floridian from Tallahassee, will represent the automobile building profession. Offseason Vern is employed at the Philadelphia shops of John and Bill Ambler, well known race car designers.

Diverse Occupations To Be Baptists Baptise Drouth, AAA, Blamed for Bread Price Increase Facing U. S. Housewives

proudly holds the spotlight as the center of nation-wide controversy.

With the price of bread increased in several large cities and forecasts of higher prices for the country generally, an ominous rumble is heard from the housewife sector.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and the baking industry have been wrangling over the one cent increase in the price of a loaf of bread, proposed recently.

Baking concerns contend that flour costs are up as much as $2 a barrel; that shortening prices have risen from 200 to 300 per cent: and that all other ingredients are higher in price.

They point out that this year's wheat crop will probably be 50,-000,000 bushels short, which may result in jacking up still further the price of flour. A huge share of the blame the bakers attribute to Mr. Wallace's own AAA processing taxes; also to the drouth, and that mysterious, devastating disease called "rust," which, blown on the wind, spoiled great areas of wheat throughout the nation Wallace countered with the accusation that the cost of ingredients, in recent months, has increased only about 1/2 cent a loaf; furthermore, he contends the bakers themselves have asserted that operating expenses, not the cost of ingredients, form the largest item in the retail price of bread.

According to the secretary, the proposed one cent increase would cost consuming (and fuming) housewives about 300 million dollars a year, and bring to millers a profit of about half that amount.

IN a hearing held to justify the one cent price increase, it was decided that the variety of factors involved—L e., baking formulas and local conditions make it very difficult to estimate relative costs.

However, the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics offers statistics which reveal that the cost of materials for a loaf of bread has more than doubled since 1933, whether or not this justifies a price increase now. Here's the table:

A Department of Agriculture bread expert is pictured above studying loaves made from various grades of American wheat. The proportion of materials that go to make up an average loaf of bread is indicated below. Since 1933 the price of flour if a loaf of bread has risen 1.61 cent; milk, .05 cent; lard substitute, include labor and delivery costs. Since these vary in different parts of the country, it is virtually impossible to arrive at a figure which represents accurate ly the average cost of getting a loaf of bread to the consumer.

However, a Senate committee report of 1931, when the retail price of a loaf was 8.7 cents, gives in these estimates an approximate idea:

Among its findings, the 1931 committee reported that: large bakeries did not pass on to the consumer a decrease in the price of wheat, even though white flour prices generally reflected that decrease; the bread retail-er usually obtained a one cent profit per loaf; and there was a distinct trend toward monopoly in control of the bread-baking
