

BAIRD BACK FROM FURNITURE MART, BUYING IS BRISK

Heaviest Buying in All History; Furniture Styles Are Growing More Modern

Furniture styles are growing more modern, especially for the bedroom," said Fred Baird, manager of Storch's Shelby store who is just back from the Chicago exposition. Thirty-three buyers from the Storch chain of Southern stores attended the show, including Tom Smith of the Charlotte store. Furniture prices have advanced about ten per cent, but yet they are lower than prices that prevailed in 1930-31, said Mr. Baird. The thousands of buyers from all over the country who went to Chicago anticipate a great season and bought like mad men. Some lines were so over-sold that deliveries can not be made for sixty to ninety days.

The big Chicago furniture mart occupies two blocks and is 28 stories high. In this mammoth building, all manufacturers display their lines which include everything imaginable for the home. The display of antique reproductions is marvelous, says Mr. Baird.

In colors of upholstery, the predominating shades will be blue, green, white, gold and brown. Furniture is more substantially made than ever before and because of mass production, prices are comparatively low, says Mr. Baird.

ABANDONED BOY FOUND IN SOUTHPORT GARAGE

SOUTHPORT, July 20.—(P)—An abandoned baby boy, two months old, was found in a private garage here. This note was pinned to the blanket that covered him:

"Please give this baby a home. A mother who loves it but can't keep it. Thanks."

The child was placed temporarily in the Brunswick county hospital.

SMALL TALK

By MRS. RENN DRUM

LOOKS LIKE OLIVE OYL and Wimpy are going to get jeaped on Popeye's prize fight doesn't it?

To which comment Wyan Washburn adds that he think "it's a jeep trick."

SPEAKING OF CITY slickers—Weren't, but we are now—Sarah Riviere has proved herself to be City Slicker No. 1. Last Sunday she and her mother, Mrs. E. P. Riviere, were browsing about among the quiet old stones in a country cemetery at one of the county churches, when they ran into a bed of may pops—sometimes called apricots—which brought from Sarah an amazed exclamation:

"Just look at all these little water-melons. I didn't know they planted their watermelons in the cemetery!" I wonder if she'll ever have the nerve to look a watermelon in the face again.

ALLEN AND PEARSON, writers of the Washington Merry Go Round feature, recently carried sketches of members of the Roosevelt family, and in the sketch on Elliott Roosevelt they referred to the fact that he was at one time given a boost by O. Max Gardner, ex-governor of North Carolina, who as attorney for the aeronautical chamber of commerce, helped him to secure a job, with the chamber in the spring of 1924.

AGAIN, READING FROM Washington Merry Go Round, I find the following and throw up my hands in despair:

"Spinach, dietary standby of a million mothers, is not what it was supposed to be, according to the nutrition section of the department of agriculture.

"However, the tens of millions of children who will greet this with shouts of glee, had better hold their applause. For kale is the new pet of the dieticians, and kale tastes worse than spinach. Turnip greens, beat-tops, and dandelion greens all have been found to outrank spinach in value—and taste.

"Apparently the worse it tastes, the better it is for you.

"Spinach's chief weakness, according to Dr. Hazel Muncell, is that its calcium is not so well absorbed by the body. Kale's calcium is 76 per cent utilized against only 39 per cent for spinach.

"Calcium is extremely necessary in the building of tooth structure. It is present in spinach, but unfortunately is accompanied by another chemical called oxalate. Instead of being absorbed by the body, the calcium combines with the oxalate to form an insoluble substance in the stomach. So strong is the attraction of oxalate for calcium that the latter valuable chemical is minutely withdrawn from the human system, instead of being added to it.

"Spinach is the worst of the lot," says Dr. Muncell. It is not injurious, and indeed is a splendid source of iron. For iron it can't be beaten.

"But one dose of iron a week is enough," says she. Pop-eyes to the contrary notwithstanding."

And perhaps you wonder why the despair? It isn't that I'm not delighted with the prospect of not having to eat any more spinach, but what are all of us to do about what we've already eaten?

Besides that, now that I've just gotten to where I can eat spinach without a grimace, I have to start all over and learn to eat beat tops. And if the problem of eating it myself were all I had to contend, I'd just lay claim to having too much iron and calcium already and turn thumbs down, but for the sake of the example set my two youngsters I'll have to learn to eat it and pretend to like it.

I suggest that the schools add to the curriculum a course in beat-top eating.

Red poppies spread beneath a summer moon.

Their petals closed, their colors soft, subdued;

I saw them when they blazed triumphantly.

A field of scarlet pagentry at noon.

May find contentment in a quieter hour.

A tranquil respite from the heat of day.

And so in peaceful contemplation, smile.

TALK TO PARENTS

Insurance companies report a very high accident rate among pre-school children. The death rate from disease has always been comparatively high among very small children.

However, of late years some of the worst scourges of babyhood, such as diphtheria, have lost much of their terror, owing to the discovery of preventive treatment. One might suppose that a little more use of preventive measures would also be effective in lessening the toll of accidents, fatal and otherwise, to toddlers.

In schools and factories, accidents are comparatively rare when one takes into account the number of people concerned and the dangerous equipment which they may have to handle. If accidents were frequent, public indignation would be aroused and measures taken to improve conditions. The average home, however, is exempt from oversight, and correspondingly lax in the most ordinary safety measures.

No one can insist on barred windows, guarded flames, well insulated wires. No one sees to it that unprotected roofs and fire escapes are not used as playgrounds, that electricians are not left where the baby can investigate them that pots and of boiling fat or liquid are not a constant hazard to the uncertain balance of every young.

Some of these safeguards cost money, it is true, but the lack of them may cause death. If windows are not guarded, they should not be open at the bottoms. If one can afford an electric fan, one can also afford a screen to keep the whirling blades out of reach. Cooker utensils can be placed at the back of the stove or have their handles turned away from the room. Sewing machines can be closed when not in use.

Until women take the precautions in the home that they demand of schools and factories, accidents to the very young will continue to be frequent.

Rheumatism

Until it is possible to differentiate a given disease from others with similar symptoms, it is not possible to search intelligently for its cause or to institute effective treatment.

Take those diseases collectively called rheumatism. As the term is commonly employed, it covers a large variety of symptoms centering about muscle, bone and joint disturbances.

Rheumatism, it is estimated, affects 10 per cent of all persons past 40. It is 12 times as prevalent as cancer, and one-fortieth as fatal. The disease is more frequent among outdoor than indoor workers, more prevalent in rural than urban communities, and twice as frequent among the poor as the well-to-do.

The American committee for the control of rheumatism in a recent report has formulated a classification of rheumatism under six headings: those rheumatic conditions which are attributable to injury; those caused by known and established infections; those which are possibly or probably chargeable to an infection or to the poisonous products of germs; those which are essentially due to degenerative changes in tissues; those which are probably due to recognizable or suspected chemical derangements, and the sixth group embracing miscellaneous types of rheumatism which still remain unclassifiable.

Obviously, no single mode of treatment can ever be expected to prove effective in "rheumatism." On the contrary, treatment promising any good must be based on a careful diagnosis which establishes the type of the rheumatic disease, and which fits the therapy to the condition.

The report stresses the prominent role played by trauma or injury in the development of joint diseases.

Chronic or repeated injury of joints may cause changes in their structure which are at first symptomless. The damage becomes apparent only when some unusual strain is placed upon the affected joint.

Mysterious lights often observed on the slopes of Mauna Loa volcano, on the island of Hawaii, are attributed to minor outbreaks of molten lava.

Theodore Roosevelt, entering the White House at 43, was the nation's youngest president, and William Henry Harrison, who was inaugurated at 68, was the oldest.

Cross-Roads Reporter To Get Big Trip For "Good Writing"

NEW YORK, July 22.—Mrs. Susan Frawley Eisele of Blue Earth, Minnesota, has been judged the best country newspaper correspondent of 1936, it was announced today by Wheeler McMillen, editor of The Country Home Magazine, which sponsors the annual award to crossroads reporters.

Mrs. Eisele, who writes a weekly column for the Fairmont, Minn., Sentinel, lives on a farm nine miles from Blue Earth, with her husband and three children. The youngest of whom arrived almost simultaneously with word that she had been recognized as the best writer in her field.

In recognition with her work, Mrs. Eisele will receive $200 first prize, together with a trip to New York and Washington, as soon as she is able to travel. The award is the equivalent, in rural journalism, of the Pulitzer award in the metropolitan press. The winner last year was Mrs. Elizabeth Mahoney, of Ocala, Missouri.

"Mrs. Eisele does all of the home work in the house, maintains a good garden, an abundant poultry yard. Everything about the place proclaims her a model housekeeper and home maker. Unassisted Mr. Eisele does the field work on the 20 acre farm, cares for the dairy herd, the pigs in the feeding lot. The Eiseles' is a typical northwest farm home of the better class."

Excerpts from Mrs. Eisele's column, which is titled "With a Penny Fencil," follow:

"How quiet it seems after the threshing machine vanishes behind the bend in the road. The place seems empty, like after a funeral. You wish they would come back, the threshing crew, with their swearing and laughter and quarrelling. How sober the children, even, and what long faces. Behind the barn looms up a gleaming yellow stack of straw—unfamiliar and alarming in appearance—but it is a monument to a husband's toil and sweat, and suddenly it grips you most profoundly. Life becomes intensely precious. . . ."

"Maybe the well-dressed man in fashion forecasts will be wearing light coats and spats and such, but in this part of the country there will be several well dressed men wearing high-top boots lavishly decorated with mud and barnyard insignia; scare-crow effects will be especially featured, sweaters with frayed sleeves and fringed bottoms, flapping overalls, caps stiff with
