Town Wants Through Street, Not Another Dead-End Road

NWS Lauds Cecil Logan

Brunswick County Emergency Management Coordinator Cecil Logan received Special Service Award Monday night from the National Weather Service (NWS) for significant service with his work in hurricane preparedness.

In presenting the award, Al Hinn of the Wilmington NWS office told Logan, "You're an excellent example of what dedication is all about." He said Logan's advance educational efforts gave officials and citizens a realisitic idea of what hurricanes have done in the past and what to expect in the future, creating a "high state of preparedness."

The accompanying plaque signed by Richard P. Augulis, eastern regional director, cited Logan for "outstanding cooperation in working with the National Weather Service to prepare the people of Brunswick County for a hurricane and for effectively preparing the people for the hazards with Hurricane Diana, September 11-13, 1984."

The recognition will be entered in Logan's personnel file, commissioners said.

BY SUSAN USHER Shallotte officials want to turn a proposed dead-end entrance road into a through street that might help reduce traffic congestion in the business district. Aldermen delayed action Wednesday night on a request from White Investments to approve construction of a 50-foot, dead-end side road off Main Street between Hardee's and Homestyle Laundry. The street would provide access to a new restaurant to be built behind Hardee's. Before the board's next meeting on Jan. 16, town officials hope to negotiate with White and at least one other property owner to connect the proposed street with Milliken and John streets.

The Shallotte Planning Board recommended approval of the proposed street at its December meeting, but urged the town to try to work out arrangements for a through street.

However, members objected to a proposed 15-foot alleyway behind the Hardee's driveway, saying it could be connected to the new street, but not to the Hardee's driveway.

A local realtor apparently owns the small tract separating the proposed street from the existing street. But White will most likely need an easement across that tract, anyway, 'own officials noted, since the other alternative for a water connection would be costly-boring underneath Main Street. A sewer line connection is available behind Hardee's.

Aldermen agreed with the value of negotiating for a through street. Said Alderman David Gause, "It would really help the restaurant and the town.'

In other business, aldermen: •Met behind closed doors briefly, but took no action on a police department personnel matter.

•Approved an audit contract for the 1984-85 business year with S.

Preston Douglas & Associates of Whiteville at the same rate as the two previous years, $22 per hour for accountant's time and $13 per hour for clerical work, plus expenses. While the rate has not changed, the amount of time to complete the audit has increased, from 122.5 accountant's hours in 1983 to 144 hours in 1984. The 1984 audit cost ...,721.

. In effect, voted to return to charging a fee of $200 for peddlers with trucks one-half ton and larger, rather than three-quarter ton and larger. The change brings the town ordinance completely in line with the state fee schedule. A second reading will be required.

·Approved, on second reading, a town taxicab ordinance. The only firm presently affected by the ordinance is Highland Cab Co., which will receive a non-exclusive franchise from the town.

*Approved on first reading, pending clarification of several points, a proposed 60-year franchise agreement governing the laying of lines or erecting of poles by Brunswick Electric Membership Corp. in town. BEMC would be required to work in conjunction with the town in locating poles and the like, would agree to repair damages incurred during the work within 10 days' notice. Otherwise BEMC would pay the town's cost of making the repairs itself, plus pay $5 per location by way of "liquidation" of damages.

Aldermen Reaves said he was concerned about the legal jargon, the meaning of the $5 clause and the long term nature of the agreement. He also said he wished BEMC would consider changing from poles to underground lines within the town. Mayor Hewett said the town attorney had also questioned the $5 payment.

·Agreed to add a drop-axle to the town's single-axle garbage truck at an estimated cost of about $5,000 including tires and rims. The truck was fined $110 by the state last month because it was overweight. The board dropped plans to buy a dropaxle last year because it thought legislation would be adopted exempting the type of truck used by the town from new state weight regulations. The new weight regulations mean the garbage truck must make more trips to the landfill each day.

·Delayed consideration of a request for a sewer extension to West Brunswick High School until hearing from Boney & Associates engineers. Town ordinances allow the board to extend a sewer outside town limits on a case by case basis, but the board has generally limited connections to within the town limits. If the request is approved, the schools would have to pay the cost of the extension.

 With only one bid received, voted to readvertise for bids to pave and patch several streets.
