Faces Of Brunswick County

BY MARJORIE MEGIVERN

This sprawling county, budding into one of the eastern seaboard's most popular resort areas, is famous for its beaches. The climate's great, too, and the seafood. There is beauty everywhere.

But any place becomes well loved mostly because of its people, and Brunswick County shines there, as well.

Its people are a wonderful mix of races, ages, and even places of origin, as oldtimers are joined by newcomers in growing numbers.

Representative faces reflecting this mix would require many pages, but here are a few of the folks who make Brunswick County a good place to be.

MARVIN ROBINSON of Leland teaches at North Brunswick High School.

PETER KAPPLER, a four-year-old from Holden Beach, has fun at a Shallotte day care center.

LESLIE CHADWICK, 93, enjoys life from her front porch in Shallotte Point.

W.T. 'RUSTY' RUSS is a popular businessman of Shallotte.

DON LEWIS is one of those summer heroes, a lifeguard at Ocean Isle Beach.

PAULINE TRIPP of Shallotte served for 15 years as town clerk.

ROZELL HEWETT, a well-known face around the county, is a former county commissioner who lives at Shallotte Point.

P.R. HANKINS lives in Bolivia, but serves the entire county as assistant superintendent of schools.
