

'A Lot Of Good People Live Here'

Now under the new management of David Frazier, this year-round nudist park is on 15 wooded acres, offering its members swimming, campsites, a hot tub and a clubhouse, all in a beautiful natural setting.

Several prominent residents enjoy the club there and Marie Somerset said of members, "They're nice people. We get along better with them than some who have lived here always."

A more public attraction is Sims Country Barbecue, not far from Coastalina Pines, where on weekend nights three kinds of barbecue are served up with bluegrass and country music. Locals, as well as visitors, enjoy the lively participation in square dancing and clogging that is part of an evening at Sims.

Owner Michael Sims lives on the premises.

The fire station, built three years ago a few miles west on 904, is perhaps the only place where Grissetown folks gather for any social life.

In an earlier day, there was more community spirit. "We used to get together in hunting season and cook deer together," Mrs. Somerset said.

Now, it appears everyone in Grissetown owns their own little business and there's little time for frivolity.

Still, they have a sense of pride in their crossroads community, and apparently agree with Gilbert Grissett that it's a place where you'll find some mighty good people.

A GOOD TIME is had by all ages at Sims Barbecue on a typical Friday night. This group is enjoying a square dance to the music of a live bluegrass band.
