Hometown Holidays Includes Open House At The Chamber

BY SUSANNE SARTELLE, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR South Brunswick Islands Chamber Of Commerce

After stuffing myself with turkey and fixings over Thanksgiving, I know for sure that the holidays are upon us! And that includes the names of all participating businesses where shoppers can register for prizes. The chamber has placed decorated boxes in each of the participating businesses, and registrations will be collected every week for the drawing.

Remember, you must register every week during the promotion. One hundred dollars will be Sartelle given away once each week through Dec. 21, and four lucky winners will have a little extra income to spend for Christmas!

There's a reason for everything, and the one for Hometown Holidays is to keep our holiday dollars right here at home in the South Brunswick Islands. We are fortunate to have shopping centers and specialty shops which can meet our needs for every gift item on our shopping list. Too, we must remember that when we keep dollars in the community, they circulate. Sure that helps the local merchants, but it also helps us all with our area economy.

Chamber members are reminded that a part of Hometown Holidays includes open house at the chamber office, Thursday, Dec. 8, from 5 to 7 p.m. Bring an ornament made from your business card to decorate the tree, and don't forget to RSVP by this Monday.

If you're a business person who's missing out on this holiday promotion, stop by the chamber for open house and see how the chamber can help boost your business during the holiday season and all year 'round.

tion was announced Nov. 7 at a statewide Farm-City luncheon in Raleigh. The Holden brothers' farm, which is located south of Shallotte on U.S. 17, was the only Brunswick County farm to receive the honor this year.

In other matters, a public hearing will be held Dec. 1 at 10 a.m. to allow comments on a proposed general permit for temporary structures. This new category of general permit would make it possible for impermanent structures with known environmental impacts, such as research projects and movie sets, to be approved more quickly.

Immediately before and after the public hearing, the CRC will consider two variance petitions and a civil penalty remission request.

On Dec. 1 at 1 p.m., the Planning and Special Issues Committee and the Implementation and Standards Committee will meet.

The planning committee will hear reports on a maritime forest survey, Buxton Woods activities, a pilot project on managing water uses, fishing practices in interior waters, Beach Sweep '88 results and the post-storm disaster plan for Nags Head. The committee also will discuss updating guidelines used to prepare land use plans.

The standards committee will discuss monitoring water quality through permit conditions, a potential rule defining "total development" and possible legislation on civil penalty criteria. Reports will be given on the consolidation of dredge and fill and Coastal Area Management Act procedural rules, the proposed electronic warfare range, and the status of the striped bass and the gypsy moth quarantine imposed by the Department of Agriculture.

On Dec. 2, the CRC will consider a variance petition and a declaratory ruling request. Following those matters, reports from the four committees will be given.
