601 Register At BCC; Classes Break Friday

Winter quarter registration is holding steady for curriculum classes at Brunswick Community College, reports Beth McLean, dean of student services. At the close of late registration and following cancellation of several classes that did not attract enough students, enrollment stood at 601, an increase of one over the 1989-90 winter quarter, she said. "I'm pleased we're not down from last winter." For the second consecutive quarter, enrollment was largest for general education courses, as opposed to vocational or technical courses. "I'm sure it's the cost factor," said Ms. McLean. While Ms. McLean did not have the exact number of general education students, she did know that 115 students are enrolled in the 11 courses offered during winter quarter that qualify for dual transcripts from BCC and the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. The new program makes it easier to students to transfer to other four-year colleges and universities. All of BCC's general education classes transfer to UNC-W, but not necessarily to other campuses. Holiday break for BCC faculty and students begins after classes on Friday, Dec. 14. Class will resume Wednesday, Jan. 2. Administrative offices at the college will be open through the end of the business day on Friday, Dec. 21. All college offices will reopen Jan. 2.
