

Man Ordered Behind Bars For Letting Dog Run Loose

A man whose pit bull dog was impounded by Southport animal control officers must spend three days behind bars himself.

Leroy Jolly, of North Caswell Ave., Southport, was charged Nov. 9 with violating city ordinances by allowing his dog to run at large within town limits and for not having proof that the dog had been vaccinated.

He pleaded guilty in Brunswick County District Court last week and was ordered to spend three days in the Brunswick County Jail and fined $100 by Judge Jerry A. Jolly. He was given a 30-day suspended sentence and placed on unsupervised probation for five years and ordered to begin serving a three-day active term immediately.

According to the criminal summons, Southport animal control officer Charles McClain charged Jolly for not registering the pit bull dog, not placing a tag and collar on the dog, allowing the dog to run at large, and not having proof that the dog had been vaccinated.

McClain filed a statement that said he received a call from a Southport resident who reported the dog kept crossing the street in front of Doshier Memorial Hospital on the afternoon of Nov. 9 and almost got struck by a car several times.

The officer found the "brindle and white" pit bull in front of the EZ Way Grocery store, "barking at people when they came by," McClain stated. He transferred the animal to the Southport animal shelter.

After being notified, the defendant paid the $6 fee to pick up the dog, but later that day demanded a refund from the city hall. He had refused to sign the citation that required a $75 fee, a $25 civil penalty for each of the three violations he had been charged with.

Judges Jolly, William C. Gore Jr., and D. Jack Hooks Jr. all heard cases in District Court last week. They are as follows:
