Two men broke into a Carolina Shores Resort home Saturday while a woman was inside. It was one of a number of break-ins reported in the Calabash area over the weekend.

A screwdriver was apparently used to pry open a front door at the residence, reported Brunswick County Sheriff's Depaty George Stanley.

The woman was inside polishing some silver when she heard a noise at the door, Stanley reported. She said the men entered her home, but not where she could see them. She said it sounded like they had a key.

The television set was also on at the time, she said.

The suspects returned and knocked on the front door. When she asked who was at the door, no one answered. She opened the door, but nobody was there, she told Stanley.

She then saw two men pushing on another door at the home and immediately called the sheriff's department.

No arrests were made in the case that is under investigation.

A screwdriver was also used to enter a garage at a home on Boundary Line Drive at Carolina Shores between Aug. 22 and Sept. 13, but no items were taken, reported Deputy Phil Bryant.

However, a $200 microwave was stolen from the Sand Dollar Realty building at Carolina Shores Saturday, reported Deputy Darryl Marlow.

The door at the realty office had been kicked open, said the owner, Nick Newton.

Doors to four other buildings at Carolina Shores were also damaged during break-ins there Saturday, but few items are missing. Deputy William Hewett reported damages of $250 to wooden doors at each
