April Had Plenty Of Showers

If the old saying about April showers bringing May flowers is true, southeastern North Carolina residents should see lots of blooms this month.

The region received 3.12 inches of rain in April, which was .14 inches above average, according to the National Weather Service in Wilmington.

A heavy downpour on April 22 tied the old record for that date of 1.47 inches set back in 1907.

The greatest rainfall in a 24-hour period was 1.86 inches on April 21 and 22, according to the weather service report.

Total precipitation for the year is 17.97 inches, which is 3.87 inches above normal.

The weather service reports that the average monthly temperature was 61.5 degrees, which was 1.6 degrees below normal. April was only the third month with below-normal temperatures since December 1989.

A low of 31 degrees on April 3 broke the old record low of 32 degrees for that date set in back 1907. Another record low of 33 degrees on April 6 tied the record set in 1944.

The highest temperature for the month was 87 degrees on April 24 and the lowest reading was 31 degrees on the third.

Average wind speed was 8.5 mph. The highest gust was 37 mph from the north on April 4, and the highest one-minute average wind speed was 28 mph from the north on the fourth.

The weather service recorded 10 clear days, eight partly cloudy days and 12 cloudy days during the month.

The region received 74 percent of the possible sunshine. There were three days with thunderstorms and one day with heavy fog.

The highest sea-level pressure was 30.40 inches on April 13, and the lowest reading was 29.56 inches on April 4, according to the report.
