Closest-to-the-pin winners were Erickson at the third hole, Meader at the eighth, John Romero at the 12th and Rod Marifield at the 16th.

In other golf news, Carolina Shores member Bill Haupt recorded his fourth career hole in one Saturday while playing the Osprey Point course on Kiawah Island, S.C.

The 75-year-old Haupt hit a nine-iron on the 124-yard 15th hole. Playing partners were Bern Distler, Bob Flaccavento and Art Searby.

Visitor Aces 14th At Olde Fort Club

After 40 years of golf, Joseph S. Cassaro of Schenectady, N.Y., made his first hole in one last Thursday at Olde Fort Golf Club in Winnabow.

Cassaro aced the par three, 131-yard 14th hole using an 8-iron to highlight his round of 89.

He was playing with John Monty, also of Schenectady, who owns a home in the Shallotte area. Jerry Belcher also witnessed the ace.

Monty said the golfers were hitting into the sun and didn't see the ball fall into the hole. After searching behind the green for 10 minutes, they found the ball in the cup.

State Places Ban On Shark Finning

The N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries has imposed restrictions on the finning of sharks, which is the removal of fins and discarding of carcasses.

A state proclamation issued Monday makes it illegal to possess shark fins aboard a vessel or land fins without shark carcasses.

The new regulation also prohibits the possession of fins constituting more than 7 percent by weight of any shark harvest.

Licensed fish dealers are required to keep records of all sharks landed at their facilities. The regulations do not apply to dogfish sharks.

Getting The Kinks Out

West Brunswick senior Willie Gore practices his swing last week in preparation for the upcoming high school baseball season. Practice for baseball and other spring sports officially begins Monday. If ground hog Punxsutawney Phil can be believed, spring athletes are in for another six weeks of chilly weather.

Calabash Man To Head PGA Director's Group

James P. Hart Jr. of Calabash has been elected chairman of the PGA of America's Section Executive Director Group.

HART

Hart, executive director of the Carolinas PGA Section, was named to the post at a recent conference of the PGA's executive directors in Orlando, Fla. He will serve a two-year term.

Each of the PGA's 41 geographic sections employs an executive director. As chairman, Hart will function as a liaison with the PGA of America officers and staff, according to a news release.

"On behalf of our 1,600 PGA members and apprentices in the Carolinas Section, we're delighted and proud of Jim," said Carolinas PGA President Will Mann.

"We're honored that all the sections in the PGA will be represented by our director," Mann said. "Jim has been recognized as one of the outstanding administrators in golf, and we're confident he will do as good a job nationally representing the 41 sections as he does with our section."

PGA of America President Gary Schaal said it was "a marvelous choice for Jim to represent the association on this level."

"This was not a popularity contest but recognition of the best person for the job," Schaal added. "Jim will bring a new level of awareness to the executive director's board. I'm happy for Jim, and this is great for the PGA and an honor for the Myrtle Beach area."

Hart has been employed by the Carolinas PGA Section, headquartered in North Myrtle Beach, S.C., since 1981. He took over as executive director in January 1986. The Carolinas Section is currently the largest of the PGA's 41 sections with more than 1,600 professional members.

Hart resides in Carolina Shores North with his wife, Mary, and their children Katie, Jimmy, Charlie and Anna.
