PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Hewett In Supply School Spotlight

Dr. Pat Hewett, a local chiropractor, has been chosen for the Supply Spotlight, a monthly recognition of volunteer and teacher excellence at Supply Elementary School.

Through her efforts, each regular classroom has either fresh or salt water fish tanks financed by $5,000 in donations collected from local businesses last summer and cared for by trained fifth graders, and an embryology project that helped kindergarten and first grade classes learn about animal reproduction. The chicks and ducks that hatched were sold and the money divided among participating teachers for purchase of classroom supplies.

Also, Hewett has worked with several PTA projects, including running a Fall Festival booth and working on the Teacher Appreciation Week committee.

Hewett began volunteering when her son, Kelly, was in kindergarten at Union School, and continued at the new Supply school.

"One of the reasons I love volunteering is because it wasn't there when I was in school," she said. "Besides, teachers physically don't have enough time, supplies or 'self' to meet all the needs kids bring with them to school. So I'm just one more pair of hands when I can be."

A goal of hers is to make sure students have the opportunity to experience not only nature, but education as well.

Hewett values children "more than anything," she said, adding in reference to the loss of her infant son Matthew, "When you lose one, you know the value of a child."

She and her husband, Tom, of Supply, are the parents of two sons.
