When I was younger you were my pillar of stone, that I could hide behind when I needed strength. As I grew older and made mistakes, you were still my pillar of strength. Always there to hold me up, until I was strong enough to stand alone. As the years have chipped away at my pillar of stone, and God has called you home. I realize that God has now given me my strength; from you to carry on. Although your time on this earth has come and gone, what you have given me will live forever... We love you and miss you Bob.
