We all look at our natural resources and sigh when we think of the people who would like to cut it down, dig it up, or make use of it for monetary reasons. Did you know the oldest conservation program we have was when President John Quincy Adams protected a 1,377 acre forest of live oak wood to be preserved for building Navy ships? Located on Route 98 near Seabreeze, Florida, it is a woodland and a coastal habitat that has all but disappeared and one you may wish to stop and walk through whenever you are driving south.

Jean and Al Hendricks are home after a month aboard their "Sea Rover," a 31-foot Willard 'rawler which carried them up the Bay into exploring the western shore. They spent some time on the Potomac and sightseeing in Washington, D. C., and in the Solomons. It was a thoroughly delightful experience with fine weather.

One of the problems our village has--seemingly so far unsolvable--is the emergence from nowhere of delightful and various-sized animals who appear at our doors, begging to be taken in. Marilyn and Jake Stern on Whittaker Point Road have two lovely male puppies, part Collie, that need a home or homes right away. They are black, brown, and white, very young, cute and healthy looking. Call Marilyn at 249-0344 if you know who owns these dogs or if you would like to provide them with a home.

Happy July birthdays to Selma Morris on the 7th; Vivian Delamar, July 10th; and Jackie Mason last week.

Great grandmother Ruth Mason and grandparents Faye and Jackie Mason are eagerly hearing news of their 5-week old grandchild, Jarrett Wayne Shields. Vicky, the Masons' daughter, and John Shields are the proud parents.

Phyllis and Robert Fasnacht had the James Olivers of Lupton Drive as dinner guests this past week.

Rev. James Oliver is happy to announce that he will be the full-time pastor for the Oriental First Baptist Church from now on, beginning immediately. That is surely good news to all of our church families.

The OWC Garden Club will meet a week early this month in order to enjoy a guest speaker from Charlotte, who will be the house guest of Lorna Langley. The meeting, in Lorna's rose garden, will be at 10 am, July 22, and will feature a noted rosarian, Dr. Bonnie Cone, who is also a flower judge in our state. Dr. Cone is a former Chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and recipient of eight doctorates in education and the humanities. This meeting is open to anyone who would like to learn about roses. Please bring a chair.

Jean Reynolds' glads get prettier and prettier and Georgia Boyd's garden has some beautiful dahlias in it. These two gals are gardeners.

Tales of interesting places and much sailing talk was the order of the day at our house on Monday night as Rachel and Euticus Wenn told of their 14 years aboard their 30-foot Columbia, now in dry dock for repairs and a paint job at Sailcraft Marina. Lilly the dog listened and agreed with most that was said. A Princeton professor of music and a symphony conductor by profession, the Wenns gave up the academic life to run the family tobacco farm. In 1971 they began living aboard their boat and have had many adventures. After the danger of hurricane is past, they plan to sail to Jamaica and winter in Yucatan. They have spent many months sailing in the Caribbean and the Bahamas and are typical of the sailors who stop in Oriental, pleasant and easy to know.

Shellfish and cholesterol

Question: Must I stop eating shellfish to reduce my level of cholesterol? Answer: No, says Dr. Howard Eler, professor at Albert Einstein College of Medicine. Just to match the cholesterol in one egg, you'd have to eat more than one dozen oysters, or two small lobsters. Shrimp is also relatively low in cholesterol.

Some folks are still dishing out fishy advice because they don't know that shellfish data from the 1940's were all wet! Shellfish have a clean bill of health.
