A Screen For the Dress Form

A skeleton in the closet isn't half as obnoxious as a dress form out in the open but, fortunately, something can be done about the dress form. Concealed behind this simple, three panel screen "Lizzie," the dummy, can eavesdrop on the family and all the boarders without her presence being suspected.

The screen frame is made of one size material, preferably 3/4 inch by 1 1/2 inches or thereabout. The detail drawing shows the frame as it appears from the rear. A good way to fasten the pieces together at the joints is with a screw as long as the material is thick put in the center of the joint from the rear and four nails of similar length put in the corners of each joint from the front. The nail heads will be covered by the screen fabric.

The hinges can be of steel or brass, plain or fancy, two or three screws, placed about a foot from the top and bottom. The "feet" are simply wood blocks or strips, to afford firm three-point support on uneven floors.

The shelf can be at any convenient height. It is pivoted on screws or nails set into the uprights through eye screws in the rear edge of the shelf as close to the end as is safe. When the screen is to be folded up the shelf can be allowed to hang down in the panel. The supporting wire is a loop, hung from nails or screws and extending across the shelf. Saw cuts about 1/4 inch deep in the ends of the shelf allow the wire to set in and prevent it from slipping. When the shelf is to be let down the wire is simply released from the saw-cuts and allowed to slide back behind the shelf. Hooks or nails can be put in the rear of the frame for yard sticks and anything else that seems to belong there.

The frame and shelf are painted some suitable color before the covering is put on. The screen should be covered on the front with some fabric that will harmonize with the color scheme of the room in which it is to stand. Some of the possibilities are cretonne, glazed chintz or plain or painted burlap on which a bright print is pasted. The fabric is tacked to the face of the frame with fancy tacks, through border strips of the same material folded double.

ADDED INCOME TO COTTON GROWERS

Payments Include First and Second Installments of Rental and Benefit Payments For 1934

North Carolina cotton growers who signed adjustment contracts have received nearly $4,000,000 in cotton benefit payments this year, according to Charles A. Sheffield, of State College.

These payments include the checks that have been sent out in the first and second installments of the rental and benefit payments for 1934. The parity payments will be started a little later.

In all, the cotton contract signers are slated to get $6,500,000 in rental, benefit and parity payments for their cooperation in the adjustment program, Sheffield said.

The tabulation of payments by counties has been completed up to November 17. On that date, North Carolina had received $3,224,579.80. Following is a list of payments by counties:

Timely Questions On Farm Answered

Question: When should turnips and rye be fed the dairy cow?

Answer: All highly flavored feeds, such as rye and turnips, should always be fed after milking as they will impart an objectionable odor to the milk if fed during or shortly before milking. All roughage should also be fed after milking. If fed before milking the air will be filled with small particles of dust which will get in the milk. Care should also be taken to keep wild onions away from the animals, especially in the late fall and early spring. The cows should be taken off pasture and given a dry feed for at least six hours before milking at these times.

Question: Is it advisable to feed wet mash at this time of the year?

Answer: Wet mash has a definite place in poultry feeding. It may be used at this time of the year to bring birds into production and will also retard the neck molt in early hatched pullets. Care, however, should be exercised in feeding the mash. It should be fed at mid-day or in the early afternoon and only as much mash should be fed as the birds will clean up in 15 minutes.

Question: When should manure be applied to the garden plot?

Answer: Manure is best applied during the fall and winter months. On soils of average fertility about ten two-horse loads should be broadcast to the acre and plowed under as soon as possible. This fall or winter plowing not only keeps all plant nutrients in the soil but it also aids in the destruction of insect pests and plant diseases by exposing them to the freezing weather. If manure is applied in the spring or summer it should be in a well-rotted condition.
