Timely Farm Questions Answered

Question: How can the size of eggs be increased? Answer: The size of eggs, while somewhat influenced by feeding, is an inherited characteristic. The selection of standard eggs for hatching will gradually increase the size, but, if the flock is laying small or sub-standard eggs, the quickest way to increase the size, is to get rid of the present flock and buy chicks that come from hens producing large eggs. Careful records should be kept on all breeding birds and only the eggs from those that produce standard eggs should be used for hatching purposes.

Question: What seasoning should be used in making sausage at home? Answer: Only salt, black pepper and sage are used in home-made sausage. The amount to use depends on how much sausage is to be made. For 50 pounds of meat one pound of table salt, two and one-half ounces of ground black pepper, and two ounces of sage make a good seasoning. These ingredients should be thoroughly mixed with the meat before it is ground. The amount of this seasoning may be increased or decreased so as to conform to the amount of meat used.

Question: What causes dairy cows to chew wood or bones and eat dirt? Answer: This shows that the dairy ration is deficient in mineral matter which should be corrected at once. Examine the ration carefully and add those feeds that are high in minerals. Legume hays, such as cowpeas, soybean, clover and alfalfa are rich in calcium and will supply a sufficient amount of this mineral for the average cow. Phosphorous is supplied by wheat bran, cottonseed meal and soybean meal. These feeds contain about 30 per cent of this mineral. It might be well to add two pounds of a mineral mixture composed of equal parts of finely ground limestone and steamed bone meal to each 100 pounds of the concentrate ration.
