HIT OR MISS

Do you know, or have you in mind a bit of public improvement which ought to be made in or around Hertford?

If so, and if the work does not call for materials which cannot be secured, let your suggestion be known to E. W. Lordley, District Administrator of the ERA, or to any of the local representatives.

The Government will not furnish materials.

Mr. Lordley says that these will shortly be men out of work for lack of a project, a number of them because of the fact that the work on the project recently put into effect on the county-owned property across the Perquimans River Bridge from Hertford, was ordered stopped because of the dissatisfaction expressed by a number of citizens who objected to having the trees cut down on this property.

A force of men is at present engaged in cleaning up that area which has been cut over, but this work will not last long.

ERA workers are at a loss to make work projects which do not call for materials. It does seem that somebody ought to be able to think of more work projects of a nature which would be of real benefit to the community. It might be that, even though it does call for materials, there is some work so important that materials might be secured from other than ERA sources.

The unemployed should be given employment, but if possible they should be put to work on projects which amount to something.

Mr. Lordley wants your suggestions. Now is the time for the people to have a voice in this matter.

If you have an idea, don't sit and wonder why certain things are not done and why certain others are done. Let the ERA officials have the benefit of your ideas on this subject. They will welcome your suggestions.

Nancy Dawson, of Elizabeth City, is the almost three-year-old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Nixon, of Hertford. Sometime ago Nancy's mother said, "Nancy, Fred has measles," whereupon Nancy exclaimed, "O, Mamma, I like them. I had some for supper last night."

Nancy's amazing statement was explained later when she was heard to say to her Daddy, "Did you know that Fred has noodles?"

J. P. Elliott, of Route Three, is one of the County's most prominent farmers. I was much gratified to have him voluntarily subscribe to The Perquimans Weekly last week. I mean, of course, that the subscription was unsolicited.

After Mr. Elliott had paid the price of a year's subscription he asked what the price would be for a life subscription.

At the question I sat up and took notice. You see, I take a great deal of pride in The Perquimans Weekly. Whenever an approving word is spoken I respond with a smirk. It is probable that, had I been a cat, I would have commenced to purr at that moment, for to my ears the question had a very complimentary ring. So I tilted my chin a little higher and quite involuntarily began to preen my feathers, so to speak. (Please note that the simile of the cat is discontinued!) Frankly, I took on a few perfectly uncalled for airs. I would!

Several remarks were made by various members of the little company of people, gathered in the office of W. H. Pitt, Clerk of the Court, where the little transaction took place, some of them somewhat complimentary to the newspaper.

You can imagine, then, how my feathers drooped when Mr. Elliott followed up his question with the laconic remark that he figured the price of a life subscription would not be so much, since the life of the newspaper probably wouldn't be very long, judging from the length of the life of former Perquimans newspapers.

Now, I ask you, how would you have felt?

"Let's argue some, Mother. Let's argue about the Lindbergh case," suggested Pat, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morris, on Monday. Pat evidently enjoys an argument. Lots of people do.

"Divorce cases," remarked Judge G. V. Cowper in Superior Court this week, "may be tried at any time at the pleasure of the court," and the Judge added as an afterthought, "and the Court never gets any pleasure out of trying divorce cases."

That certain members of the Perquimans Lodge of Masons are said to be planning to eat no lunch next Tuesday, in order to be able to more thoroughly enjoy the sauer kraut dinner with which F. F. Muth, of Edenton, will entertain this Lodge, is not surprising. It is probably excusable. But it does seem a little extreme to go without breakfast also, as it is said one prominent Mason, viz: James S. McNider, is planning to do. They say that Mr. McNider has done this several times before.

J. E. Morris, Hertford's genial postmaster, is a most accommodating person. He will go out of his way at any time to do service for a friend, and is accustomed to being called on for various and sundry favors. Usually he is able to comply.

But when Judge G. V. Cowper, of Kinston, who held Superior Court in Hertford this week, walked into the postoffice and requested Mr. Morris to put his car up, Mr. Morris had to turn the Judge down.

"I would like to get you to take care of my car while I am here," said the Judge, in that courteous tone which he invariably uses, as he stepped up to the postoffice window shortly after his arrival here on Monday.

At a loss to understand, Mr. Morris replied, "I am sorry, Sir, but I have no place to keep a car." Didn't you take care of my car when I was here last?" the Judge asked. "No, Sir," the Postmaster replied. "Don't you sell Fords?" further inquired the Judge. "No, Sir," answered Mr. Morris, who began to take in the situation, "I sell postage stamps."

Judge Cowper had stepped into the wrong doorway. The Ford agency

"Stone walls do not a prison make, Nor iron bars a cage." Every time I read those lines they leave me in a rage. If what the Poet said was right, You can about this to the nation, Stone walls may not a prison make, But they're a darn good imitation. —Micky O'Brien, in Iowa State Prison "Presidio."

Philosophy

I'm not much on philosophy. I don't know all the creeds; I don't know what's inside the books My next door neighbor reads. I haven't studied ancient tongues, My English isn't good; I know I've said a lot of things That a scholar never would. But this is my experience, And so I'll pass it on; The time to be a friend to man Is when he's needing one.

I don't discuss religion. I wouldn't if I could; I know I couldn't draw the line Between what's bad and good. I've had to plod along through life And learn from other men; And so I've done a lot of things I'll never do again. But this I've found along the way The time to be a friend Is when a fellow's needing All the help that you can lend!

You needn't fret about the rich. They'll get along all right; The bills they owe don't trouble them Or kill their sleep at night. The man that's drifting down the stream,

'Neath summer's sky of blue. Has got his battles won, no doubt, And needs no help from you. But up against the current, Fighting hard to reach the land, Is a brother who'd be grateful If you'd lend a helping hand.

I'm not much on philosophy,

The books I never read; I've had to get the things I know From life's that's hard indeed. I've never seen a winter through But I've had to stand alone. Or seen some man with money. Who's forced to take a loan. So if you have a cheer to give, Or extra strength to spend, Go out and help the man along Who really needs a friend. —Selected.

People And Plants Need Similar Diet

Research Reveals That So-Called Impurities In Fertilizers Are as Important as Human Food Vitamins. Close similarity between the food requirements of children and the food requirements of plants—cotton and corn for example—is being pointed out in a series of interesting advertisements specially prepared for this newspaper by the Chilean Nitrate Educational Bureau.

And these advertisements, agricultural scientists agree, are right in line with the most advanced research and knowledge, for they are based primarily upon the vital impurities or rare elements which, because of its natural origin, Chilean Nitrate of Soda contains.

Recent study has revealed that these impurities in plant diet are as important as the vitamins in the diet of human beings. The impurities give health and growth to plants. When they are lacking in the soil—even one of them—growth is retarded, general health is ruined, death of the plant often results. Just as vitamin A in children's food protects against infection and "catching" diseases, so the impurities—rare elements such as iodine, boron, magnesium, strontium, calcium, lithium, sodium, etc., protect plants against diseases and give them the health that produces robust

These impurities in Chilean Natural Nitrate are Nature-given. Therefore, they are present in this nitrate in Nature's own balance and proportion. As soil scientists study this subject it becomes increasingly apparent that nitrogen, phosphate and potash are only a part of a plant's requirements. More and more importance is attributed to the impurities in the production of profitable crops.
