Schools Have Chance To Earn Needed Data

Under the terms of a plan just announced by State Superintendent Clyde Erwin, the high schools in this county will have the opportunity this spring to earn a supply of valuable governmental materials prepared by the Institute of Government and accumulate funds for their libraries at the same time.

The result may be that North Carolina schools will be teaching government in action instead of the conventional government in books. For the Institute of Government staff works on the theory that about 75 per cent of governmental knowledge is to be found in the heads of the officials and the methods and practices of their offices, and not in the books.

Educators everywhere will watch the experiment with wide interest. "We have the opportunity to lead the State and nation in a program of governmental instruction and preparation for citizenship," was the view expressed by Superintendent Erwin in announcing the plan to the principals and recommending its adoption in the high schools of the State.

J. E. Smith of Morganton, route 4, Burke County, has sprayed, cultivated and fertilized his apple orchard of 500 trees and reports a full crop of blooms. He used two pounds of nitrate of soda about each tree.

Demonstration settings of loblolly pines have been made in Davidson County this spring to study timber management.

Keep Brooders Clean To Save Baby Chicks

Protecting baby chicks from coccidiosis in the spring will go a long way toward reducing their death rate, says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the State College poultry department.

The chicks are infected by picking up the tiny eggs of the parasite which causes the disease, Dearstyne says. The eggs are frequently found on the ground and in the brooder house when older birds of the flock have been infected.

To control the disease, he recommends that all infected chicks be killed and buried or buried deeply. Thoroughly clean out the litter or sand from the brooder house at least every other day and replace with clean dry sand about one-third of an inch deep. Continue this frequent cleaning until the disease is checked. Feeding and drinking containers should be sterilized every few days with boiling water, since ordinary disinfectants are of no practical value on controlling this disease, Dearstyne points out.

If the weather is not too fine the chicks to the brooder house for at least seven days to keep them from picking up coccidial eggs from the ground outside the house where diseased chicks may have ranged.

Meanwhile, plow or spade the infected runways, if possible, so as to bring uninfected earth to the surface. Otherwise, the chicks should be provided with an uninfected range by some other method.

Avoid tracking germs into the brooder house or placing in the house any material which may be infected. Keep up the chicks' vitality by feeding a balanced ration and caring for them properly.

Cure And Prevention Rose Garden Trouble

Bush roses may be pruned once a year. Hybrid Teas, and Hybrid Perpetuals especially, should be pruned at least once a year. If you are growing them for garden decoration, remove half of the previous year's growth. For larger and finer blooms remove two-thirds of last year's growth. The older growth will be hard and woody, while last year's wood will be tender and more colorful. To prune rambler roses, cut at the base the canes that have flowered, leaving the new wood for future bloom. However, unless they are taking up too much space, climbers need little if any pruning.

The insects that trouble roses are not difficult to control if they are not allowed to get a start. Nicotine sprays are the remedy for sucking insects, such as aphids. Arsenate sprays will take care of the chewing insects, such as worms and beetles. Your seedsman can advise you what spray to use for your individual problem. Black Spot and mildew can be combated by dusting with "Massey Dust," a name given to a mixture of nine parts of fine sulphur and one part arsenate of lead. This should be applied about every ten days from early June until frost. You need not mix this yourself, since your seedsman can supply this formula or its equivalent.

Roses like lots of water, but they do not like wet feet—they will not tolerate standing water. Flood the rose beds so that the soil is wet to a depth of at least six inches during the dry spells, and spray the foliage in the morning when the sun is shining—not in the late afternoon. Afternoon sprays encourage Black Spot and mildew.

Hybrid Tea roses may be protected in winter by hilling up the soil around the plants. Climbers may be taken down and covered with a soil or board frames. In a mild climate all that is needed is a windbreak, plus some salt hay or other material that does not pack too solid.—J. W. Johnston, in McCall's Magazine for April.
