

Seymour Chappell Buried On Monday

Seymour Chappell, 67, died at his home on Monday evening. Burial was conducted from the home on Monday afternoon, with the Rev. D. S. Dempsey, Pastor of the Hertford Baptist Church, conducting the service, assisted by Rev. Miss Alma Howell, of Hertford, and the Rev. Mr. Powell, of Norfolk, Va. Burial took place in the family burying ground, near Bethel.

Active pallbearers were W. E. Jordan, M. E. Dail, T. W. Nixon, Mark Hathaway, J. T. Britt and C. I. White.

Honorary pallbearers were J. C. Warren, C. N. Griffin, C. E. Byrum, and J. E. Jackson, all of Edenton; W. H. Hardcastle, J. C. Blanchard, R. C. Skinner, A. N. Jordan, J. W. Darden, W. M. Byrum, Z. A. Harris, E. L. Reed, J. A. Perry, C. R. Perry, J. P. Perry, G. W. Butler, W. R. Howell and N. E. Chappell.

Mr. Chappell was a man of splendid character and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was a member of the Hertford Baptist Church and held membership in the Woodman of the World.

For thirty years he owned and operated the Hertford Dairy, having given up the work a few years ago because of failing health. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Roxana Rogerson Chappell, and the following children: Mrs. D. M. Jackson, Mrs. Lucy Elliott, Mrs. P. J. Boyce, Archie Chappell and Roy Chappell, of Hertford, and Arthur Chappell, of Edenton. Nine grandchildren also survive.

Grapes Affected By Harvest

A mistake frequently made by vineyard owners is that of picking the grapes before they are fully ripe. Immature grapes lack the necessary sugar and solids to keep well and to develop a full, rich flavor after picking, says Prof. M. E. Gardner, horticulturist at State College.

Since many varieties are fully colored before maturity it is not easy to determine just when they are ripe, he added. The ability to tell when a grape is ready for picking comes largely from experience.

Gardner offered a few general suggestions as a guide to grape harvesting: Watch for the full development of flavor and aroma, color according to the variety, the turning of leaves to brown, the dropping of leaves on the bunches, the falling of berries from the bunches, and a few berries pulled at random from the vine is also a guide.

Small pointed shears should be used in removing bunches from the vines, with the stem being cut close to the bunch so the point will not puncture other clusters.

After picking, the grapes should be placed in the shade of the vines until they are packed or carried into the packing shed. All defective grapes should be removed from the bunches before they are offered for sale.

When the bunches are well trimmed and packed closely in the basket with the stems down, they will be in a good condition for shipping and will present an attractive appearance.

The muscadine grape, not of the bunch type, is hard to ship and therefore is used largely at home and in nearby markets for wine, grape juice, and for fresh consumption.

Diary farming is increasing in Haywood County, according to observations by county agent W. D. Smith.

HIT OR MISS

Johnny (whose name appeared in this column last week): Mrs. White, you will have to write me up in your paper again this week. Mother can't find the paper.

There is at least one woman in Perquimans who doesn't become excited when a traffic cop starts an argument about such matters as wrong turns at red lights. Mrs. W. P. O'Donnell is much more concerned about more important matters—or less important, depending upon the point of view.

Mrs. O'Donnell, who is the wife of one of the engineers of the State Highway Commission in the District Office at Hertford, motored to Rocky Mount on Friday, taking a party of friends.

In driving out of the city Mrs. O'Donnell violated one of the traffic regulations by making a wrong turn at a red light. When the officer halted the car and reminded the driver of her error, meantime writing her name in his formidable little book as she obligingly furnished the required information, Mrs. O'Donnell noticed with some irritation that he was not familiar with the spelling of her name.

"Please," she requested, "do not write O'Donnell with a little d." Possibly the cop was impressed with the lady's nonchalance. After a few pertinent questions and a polite request that she be more careful in the future, he agreed to overlook the little detail of the wrong turn and allowed her to proceed on her way.
