not able to give what is promised." "I would not advise you," he said, "to build your lives on money." "Even the best home," he said, "does not take the place of Christ. Cars, money, books, sons, daughters, wife; one by one, I have seen them leave the home, and leave the man with nothing to which to turn for comfort."

"Do not be satisfied with the ordinary," he said. "Paint some new picture, preach some new sermon. Don't start out to be just another doctor, just another preacher. Be a better doctor, be a better preacher."

In closing, the minister said, "We are standing in trying times, hard times, testing times. Possibly no more trying, no harder, no more testing times than other times have been, but the way you and those like you decide is going to determine the future of civilization. If enough young people chose the trivial, we may look for deterioration. If the world had rather continue unbrotherly than to follow Jesus Christ in building a great brotherhood of all men, we need not look for a better world. The world is looking for heroic spirits. Some have retreated, and have announced it to the world. But there is something in you which refuses to retreat. We see many things that are not ideal in the world. We are not willing to surrender. Every hero of the past, every man or woman who has dared to stand for Right challenges you and me to heroic service. We are determined to leave this world a better place in which to live. May we not go away. May we face the hard tasks. May we be good soldiers of Jesus Christ. "Will ye also go away? Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."
