Scholarship Offered To 4-H Club Members

A one-year scholarship to State College will be awarded by the National Cottonseed Products Association to the North Carolina 4-H club member who grows and exhibits the best dairy calf at the State Fair this fall.

The scholarship, designed to stimulate interest in dairy calf club and in the value of feeding a balanced ration, will be open to any bona-fide 4-H club member from 10 to 20 years of age, said L. R. Harrill, 4-H club leader at the college. Since the association feels that boys who own their calves will take a greater interest in calf club work, it requires that all competitors for the scholarship must exhibit their own calves at the fair.

The condition of the animal, the club member's record, and the club member's activity during the year will be taken into consideration in determining the winner, Harrill stated.

The winner must be eligible to enter college, and his application for entrance to college must be accepted prior to the opening of the college term the next fall.

Selection of the winner and the awarding of the scholarship will be made under the supervision of the 4-H club department of the Agricultural Extension Service at State College.

The scholarship will be good for a course in dairying, as the association wishes it to go to a club member who will continue his work in that field.

Those interested in competing for this or other scholarships now offered for excellence in club work are asked to get in touch with their county agents or L. R. Harrill of State College, Raleigh.
