Intensive Program Planned For Eastern Demonstration Clubs

Plans for an intensive program to expand home demonstration work and make it more effective next year have been adopted by counties in the northeastern quarter of the State.

These plans, said Miss Pauline Smith, district home agent at State College, include the following:

To hold in each county a school, conducted by D. S. Weaver and Miss Pauline Gordon, of State College, on the installation of farm water systems.

To emphasize rural electrification in each county, and to hold schools where proper wiring of houses and use of current will be explained by electrical authorities.

To have a market in each county where farm women may sell their products direct to urban buyers. The market may be a bazaar, a curb market, or a roadside market.

To place more emphasis on 4-H club work, and to have every girl give more attention to good posture.

To have all members of every home demonstration club root shrubs, set out at least three trees, and participate in flower arrangement and Christmas decoration meetings.

To have in each club community a clean-up campaign during the better homes week.

To have a flower show or a flower arrangement school in each county seat, and to have every club member plant a living Christmas tree in her yard.

For each club to have at least one cultural subject; such as, drama, story telling, reviews of current fiction, pictures, music, and State history.
