160th BIRTHDAY OF OLD GLORY

Proudly waving in the breeze for eight years, Old Glory has been the symbol of our country since June 14, 1777, when it was adopted by the Continental Congress. At left: an artist's conception of the U. S. Marines displaying the National Flag and their colors. Right: Betsy Ross, traditional maker of the first Stars and Stripes. Below: the rattle-snake and Grand Union flags, forerunners of Old Glory.

Eight score years have passed since Old Glory became the flag of our country, and its birthday will be celebrated on June 14. Almost the same in design as it was 160 years ago, its colors wave over our nation as a symbol of justice to those who seek liberty under its folds. It is the most beautiful of all national flags.

Tradition points to Betsy Ross as the needlewoman whose fingers wrought with loving care the first sample of the Stars and Stripes, but the fate of the original Star Spangled Banner is unknown and it is difficult to either prove or disprove the legend.

Before the Revolution there were many flags, some of them bearing beavers, pine trees, anchors, rattle-snakes and other insignia, each of them favored by one of the several colonies. The Grand Union Flag, in which the British Jack was shown where the stars now appear in a blue field, was the immediate ancestor of Old Glory.

Both the Grand Union Flag and one bearing a rattle-snake design were carried ashore in the Bahamas in 1776, when U. S. Marines and blue-jackets captured guns and ammunition from the British. During its brief career the former flag was accorded many honors, but it was never formally acknowledged by Congress.

Since June 14, 1777, our only flag has been the Stars and Stripes, because on that date it was officially adopted by the Continental Congress. From time to time changes in the numbers of stars or stripes have been authorized, but the basic design remains much the same.

There have been many highlights in our flag's history. John Paul Jones' frigate Ranger received a salute from the French in Quiberon Bay, February 14, 1778, the first salute to the Stars and Stripes from a foreign power. Lieutenant Presley N. O'Bannon, of the U. S. Marines, hoisted it at Derne, Tripoli in April, 1805, the first time it was ever flown over a fortress of the Old World.

By the dawn's early light, September 14, 1814, Francis Scott Key saw the Star Spangled Banner floating over Fort M'Henry and composed the song which is now our national anthem. Our flag has been beloved by Americans, eulogized by statesmen, and carried to every part of the globe. In recent years it has been the custom to observe June 14, the anniversary of our flag's adoption, as Flag Day.

Early Planted Yams Make Heavier Yield

Sweet potato plants set in the field before the middle of June will produce better yams and heavier acre yields, said L. P. Watson, extension horticulturist at State College.

When planted early, he explained, they have the benefit of a long growing season, and they usually have a chance to get fairly well established in the ground before extremely hot, dry weather sets in.

The crop will be improved if it receives a good grade of commercial fertilizer containing three per cent nitrogen, eight per cent phosphoric acid, and eight per cent potash applied with a drill at the rate of 800 to 1,200 pounds per acre.

Two-thirds of the nitrogen should come from inorganic sources and one-third from organic sources. The potash should be derived from muriate or sulphate of potash, Watson stated.

Stable manure should not be used unless it is well rotted and can be broadcast at least a month before planting time.

Disease-free seedlings should be planted in clean soil, if possible. If the soil is infested with stem rot or wilt, treat the seedlings with Semesan, or dip the roots and stems in 20-30-50 Bordeaux mixture, said Dr. R. F. Poole, plant pathologist.

He warned that Bordeaux mixture may injure the plants unless used with caution. Treat only freshly dug seedlings, and set them out immediately after they are dipped. Then water the plants at once.

Or the seedlings may be dusted with a mixture of 25 per cent monohydrated copper sulphate and 75 per cent lime.

When you trade in your car to buy a new one you find you get a bigger trade-in allowance.

Here are actual letters from automobile dealers who say:

"We can assure you that there is no comparison in the trade-in values of automobiles which have had proper care through lubrication and those which haven't"....

"Proper lubrication adds from $75 to $100 to the value of a used car two or three years old."
