IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Lydia V. Chappell, who died July 21, 1936: Just one year ago she left us Never to return again, Her home is now in Heaven Where she will with Jesus reign.

She was always bright and cheerful As she sat from morn till night Piecing up her pretty quilt tops Sometimes working by lamp light.

She would often go and visit Friends and relatives far and near Went one time as far as Texas All alone she had no fear.

She was trusting in her Saviour To protect her all the way And when death came to claim her Gently did she pass away.

We have never ceased to miss her Altho' she has been gone a year, year, When in sickness she was with us And she was to our hearts most dear.

4-H Girls And Boys To Air Impressions

Selected members from the more than 800 girls and boys who are expected to attend the 4-H Short Course at State College July 26-31 will broadcast their impressions of the event over Station WPTF, Raleigh.

There will be no 4-H broadcast on Monday, July 26, the registration day, but on the four days following, club members from all parts of North Carolina will appear on the program at 1:45 p. m.

It is expected that sufficient musical talent can be found among the group to devote a part of the program to entertainment. Last year, the Johnston County 4-H string band composed of club boys from that county, made quite an impression with their arrangements of oldtime ballads.

L. R. Harrill and Miss Frances MacGregor, State club leader and assistant club leader respectively, are in charge of the week's activities, which include classroom work, addresses by outstanding men and women, sight-seeing, and organized recreation.

Last year nearly 750 club members from practically every county in the State attended the Short course. An even larger number is expected this year, since the program is, according to those in charge, the biggest and best ever planned.

PAPER MONEY INTERESTING HOBBY OF DR. BLANCHARD

(Continued from Page One) story is told in another language. A variety of bills, of various dates, of various denominations, issued by various states, by private banks, by the Confederacy, and by the United States Government, showing the frequency with which one issue is replaced by another, even in recent times, form the collection. There are beautiful bills, exquisite engraving, known as greenbacks and first issued as a war revenue measure in the year 1862, were, like many of the present day bills, printed in green ink.

There are small bills, both as to size and as to the amount they represent. Few of this generation, perhaps, know that the government once issued a paper bill for 10 cents. "Shin Plasters" they were sometimes called. There was also a 25 cent bill. The collection is complete, with bills of various denominations of recent issue, and even these new bills, familiar though they may be, have points of interest not discernible to the average person who can only appreciate that which is pointed out by the connoisseur. But as one goes through the extensive collection, gleaming such bits of knowledge as he may, catching here and there a glimpse into the past as there is revealed conditions and circumstances which existed long ago, it is impressed upon one's consciousness that one day this paper money which we are using and which today is so commonplace, so utterly lacking in interest save as a medium of exchange, this paper money which we handle and never actually see, will also be treasured as relics of a by-gone day.
