

IN WASHINGTON
WHAT IS TAKING PLACE BY
Robert R. Reynolds
UNITED STATES SENATOR

There seems to be a determination on the part of many members of Congress to make the special session convening on Monday a strictly business session. Many leaders feel that the country is in no mood for prolonged discussion of problems of little vital importance to our people at the moment. The result may be a comparatively quiet gathering of the members of the national legislature with little departure from the program for which the session was called.

However, unsettled conditions abroad always have an effect on Congress and it may be difficult to avoid frequent discussion of world affairs.

But if it is true, as farm leaders contend, that the condition of farm crop prices is one of the reasons for the stock market being jittery and that the uncertain state of business is due in part to agricultural conditions, drafting of a farm program may move swiftly. Nevertheless, the question of crop control is far from settled. Some evidence is available that the West wants voluntary production control and support for this school of thought may come from the South. Certainly there will be opposition to any plan for compulsion.

In any event, individual Senators are awaiting with keen interest the findings of the Senate Agriculture Committee which has been holding hearings throughout the country. How close the views of the men who till the soil are with the legislation advanced at the last session is a subject of much interest. The real problem will be to draft a workable and equitable plan, adjust conflicting viewpoints, and do this legislative job in a hurry.

Whether the tax question will be thrown definitely into the special session is problematic. There is no doubt that the current recession in business, with no sure indications as to whether it will continue into 1938, will have an effect on tax legislation. The undistributed profits tax has not worked so well in practice. Estimated totals in tax revenue have not come up to expectations. Therefore, the business horizon will be scanned closely for new promise of Federal Revenue during the months ahead, with the hope that any upward revision in tax rates can be avoided.

Unemployment relief may not be a prominent subject during the special session. However, members of Congress are watching the unemployment census and are hopeful that citizens will cooperate in answering the questionnaires so that future action may be taken on the basis of facts.

In brief, every effort will be made in the special session to make it one of reassurance to the country. There is no doubt that business and industry are moving in uncertainty, labor strife is undoubtedly having an effect and peace making efforts are of concern to everyone and the third element in our economic life, agriculture wants new hope and confidence that its problems will be given attention. If the Congress can contribute to an easing of all this uncertainty, such a program deserves and should receive first thought. Obviously, in a Democracy such as ours, sessions of Congress should bring assurance and not a disturbance of economic conditions.

Federal expenditures for the fiscal year 1938 will average roughly $56.00 for every man, woman and child. That is a tremendous sum and there is little wonder that people are demanding that they receive a dollar's worth of return for every dollar in taxes. To give it is the big task confronting the special session.
