

Methodist Congregation Presents Pastor Purse

At the morning service, on the Sunday preceding the annual conference of the Methodist Church, a substantial purse, made up by the voluntary contributions of members of the church, was presented to the Rev. D. M. Sharpe, pastor of the Hertford Methodist Church, and Mrs. Sharpe, on which occasion Mrs. R. T. Clarke read, as she made the presentation, the following original poem:

When Conference met two years ago, We all were in a stew. For four years is the limit here. And that we all well knew.

And those who would have to go, And leave us all behind, And a new man to fill our pulpit Was the thought in every mind.

We wondered whom they'd send to us— If he could preach and visit, too, And if he'd help us raise the debt Or still let us struggle through.

So all turned out to hear you, The first Sunday that you came, To see if we would like you And you would like us the same.

And we've fond you true and faithful In all interests of the church, And we've learned to love you And Mrs. Sharpe so much.

For you've taken such an interest In every member of the church As well as in finances, Which pleased us very much.

The Woman's Missionary Society We think should love you best, For you've helped us lift the burden Of that debt—which was a pest.

So in true appreciation For all that you have done, We present this little token Which we think you've truly won.

We want you dressed up so fine When you to Conference go, That even Bishop Kern will say, "Why Hertford's fine, you know!"

And then when you come back to us, To serve another year We trust we'll be more faithful In all church work so dear.

So I present to you and Mrs. Sharpe this small token of love and appreciation from the membership of the Hertford Methodist Church.

A host of friends are delighted to know that Rev. Mr. Sharpe was appointed to serve another year in the Hertford Church at the annual conference last week.

THANKSGIVING

Now, that the harvest is almost in, We're very thankful for all, Very much thankful for physical health, That Old Nature brings in the fall: Thanksgiving's bountiful things that come,

Fruits of our thrift and toil; All the good things that keep a bad world, By the graciousness of the soil.

So, after all that Thanksgiving brings, Business for all's been good; Pecans and peanuts have been gathered in, Into the house coal and wood;

In the hills, chestnuts provided for, On the ridge, chinquapins, In North and West the pumpkins are gathered, The South's white cotton is ginned.

Some sections making the cranberry jam, Others the potato pies; And in most of the good rounded homes, Chicken, goose or turkey dies;

With all this and more when Thanksgiving comes, When such is prepared in all ranks, For abundant yield and our blessed homes, Let us all on that day give thanks.
