

WHAT'S WHAT ABOUT SOCIAL SECURITY

As another service to its readers, The Perquimans Weekly each week will give authoritative answers to questions on the Social Security law. By special arrangement with Mr. George N. Adams in Rocky Mount, N. C., the Social Security Board has consented to pass on the accuracy of answers to questions on Social Security, which may be asked by employers, employees, and others, through The Perquimans Weekly. Address inquiries to the Editor. Answers will be given here in the order in which questions are received. This is an informational service and is not legal advice or service. In keeping with Social Security Board policy names will not be published.

Question: Why should I tell my Social Security Account Number to my employer?

Answer: So that your employer can report accurately your wages by your number as well as by your name, thus giving double assurance your wages will be credited to your individual account and not to some one else who may have a name like yours. No one else has the same number you have.

Question: Will I lose my old-age insurance if my employer doesn't pay the tax he should?

Answer: No. The amount of your old-age insurance depends on the amount of your wages and not on the amount of tax your employer pays.

But if your employer doesn't pay the tax the law requires him to pay, it is likely that he also will fail to report the amount of your wages. If you have good reason to believe your employer is not making the proper reports of the taxes he deducts from your wages you could report the facts to the Collector of Internal Revenue for this district.

Question: What is the age-limit for benefits under the unemployment compensation law?

Answer: There is no age limit for benefits under the unemployment compensation law.

Question: How many employees does an employer have to have before he comes under the Social Security Act?

Answer: Employers of one or more persons are subject to the taxes provided in Title VIII of the Act.

Question: How many states have unemployment compensation laws?

Answer: All the states, the District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii have unemployment compensation laws which are a part of the national movement to combat unemployment through the Social Security Act. Each state administers its own unemployment compensation law.
