Nonmoney Income

The general run of city or urban families depend for their living entirely on money-income from services sold—mental or physical labor, or both. The rural situation is different, for a good share of the income of farm families is nonmoney income—it is the value of housing, food, fuel, ice and the products furnished by the farm for family use, plus the increase—or minus the decrease in Pauline Wiggins, Ephегenie Miller, and Harold Lawrence.

FILM FORECAST AT STATE THEATRE

HERTFORD, N. C.

Monday and Tuesday—Jungle Film stars Lamour and Milland.

Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland, the romantic team of "The Jungle Princess" are united again in the same type of picture that vaulted them to screen stardom.

Miss Lamour turns in an impressive performance as the beautiful white "goddess" living alone on a jungle island, and evidently liking it until fate, in the form of a typhoon, forces Milland, a trans-Pacific flier, to a forced landing on her island.

Milland and Lynne Overman, his mechanic, are befriended by Miss Lamour who is being kept on the island by the power-mad ruler of crocodile worshipping natives, J. Carrol Naish, who uses her as a puppet "goddess" to maintain his hold over the superstitious islanders.

Falling in love with Miss Lamour, Milland only complicates matters and makes the situation dangerous. Naish, who is also in love with her, intends to make Miss Lamour his bride and so increase his hold over the islanders.

When he finds out that Milland and Overman have watched the secret sacrificial ceremonies, he is determined that nothing shall stand in his power-mad way and decides to sacrifice the three of them to the native gods.

While they are being led to the sacrificial altar by Naish's crew of Malayan islanders, an earthquake rocks the subterranean temple, freeing the trio and trapping Naish. Emerging through a fissure in the roof they discover a yacht anchored off the island, manned by Dorothy Howe, Milland's sweetheart, left behind when he started his trans-Pacific flight.

Torn between his love for the lovely Miss Lamour and his engagement pledge to Miss Howe, Milland is ready to sail back to civilization when she releases him. He happily returns to the island by the side of his beautiful "goddess."

Miss Lamour sings two excellent songs in the film, "Lovelight in the Starlight" and "Coffee and Kisses for Two." Her natural beauty is value of crops stored for sale and livestock.

A recent survey made by the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, of 25,000 farm families in 66 counties representative of the different types of farming in this country, shows that the nonmoney income varies greatly for different parts of the country. Of the average $654 per family nonmoney income in Vermont, for instance, $510 was from farm-furnished goods used by the family; the rest was increase from crops stored for sale and from livestock.

In the Southwest, nonmoney income for white families ranged from a high average of $712 per family per year among North Carolina operators down to an average of $283 for Mississippi share-croppers; and for Negro families, from a high average of $465 per family per year for North Carolina operators down to $153 for Mississippi share-croppers.

In the rest of the country, nonmoney income ranged from an average of $656 per family per year in Pennsylvania down to $318 in the range livestock counties of Colorado, Montana, and South Dakota.

With the above information before us, it would seem that farm families displayed to the best advantage of the wonders of Technicolor as is Milland's charming good looks. The settings are magnificent, filmed as they are in the full natural hues, and the direction, done by George Archambaud, is splendid.

Thursday and Friday—Pat and Kay new surprise as star match-

A new co-starring team makes its screen debut at the State Theatre Thursday and Friday with the performance of a new Warner Bros. comedy called "Women Are Like That."

Curiously, although they have been at the same studio for several years, the lovely, dark Kay Francis and the genial, rapid-talking Irishman, Pat O'Brien, have never before worked in a picture together. Years ago on the stage, they were teamed up in "Nigger Rich."

Pat and Kay are said to make an ideal movie team. "Women Are Like That" is a gay comedy revolving around the colorful and exciting advertising business. You can imagine Pat with his staccato patter selling advertising accounts and you can also fancy Kay wielding her feminine charms for the same purpose.

While this movie is by no means a fashion show, the advance notices from producers say that Miss Francis (always listed among the ten best dressed women of the world) wears no less than thirty-five different costumes, created by the Warner stylist, Orry Kelly.

The original story of "Women Are Like That" was by A. H. Z. Carr and was printed in a national magazine under the title of "Return From Limbo." It was made into a screenplay by Horace Jackson and the picture was directed by Stanley Logan who was also responsible for Kay's highly successful comedy of political life, "First Lady."

In the cast that supports Miss Francis and Mr. O'Brien, are such notables as Ralph Forbes, Melville Cooper, Thurston Hall, Grant Mitchell and Herbert Rawlinson.

above the share-cropper group are more fortunate than low-income groups in the cities. To provide for extraordinary expenses, urban families only have one course open to them—they have to reduce expenditures in some way, usually by self-denial, which has been thought in the past to be good for strengthening character. Rural people are more fortunate, in that they can save in the same manner that urban families save or they can add something to the nonmoney income factor that will save the family from the purchase of some commodity that would have to be paid for out of cash income, regardless of what that might be.

The public mind is much disturbed at present over business recession, lack of employment, and low buying power, and properly so, for the times are most uncertain; but I do not believe that political action in every adverse wind is the answer to our economic problems. It seems to me that we need to remind ourselves that success in the past has very largely come from the use of sound sense, hard work, and confidence in our own integrity and in that of our fellow man, whether he happened to be in our own or in some other camp.

I believe that there is ample room in this country, both in the city and in the country for honest, hard-working, savvy, God-fearing people; and I do not believe that we can achieve success and financial independence by the gratification of all of our desires and by living beyond our means.

The "canyon," which is really a great horseshoe-shaped amphitheater three miles long and two miles wide, was named after Ebenezer Bryce, a Mormon pioneer who settled there in the early seventies. It is filled with a myriad of fantastic figures cut through the pink and white limy sandstone of the Paunsaugunt plateau.
