

LEGISLATION ALONE CANNOT BRING PROSPERITY

GUY A. CARDWELL,
General Agricultural Agent,
Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co.

In a recent article I expressed myself as follows: "The public mind is much disturbed at present over business recession, lack of employment and low buying power, and properly so, for the times are most uncertain; but I do not believe that political action in every adverse wind is the answer to our economic problems. It seems to me that we need to remind ourselves that success in the past has very largely come from the use of sound sense, hard work, and confidence in our own integrity and in that of our fellow-man, whether he happens to be in our own or in some other camp."

In the June issue of Carolina Co-operator, The Journal of Organized Agriculture in North Carolina, I discovered, to my gratification, that General Manager M. G. Mann of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Association and Farmers Cooperative Exchange, had given utterance to his views in this language. "Legislation alone cannot make a permanent agricultural prosperity. If farming is ever to be a permanent and successful business, we must solve our own farm problems and through co-operation grow better crops and market them in a way to get our share of the consumer's dollar, etc."

Congratulations, Mr. Mann. I firmly believe that you are on the right track, as is also Governor Hoey, if he has been correctly quoted as saying "that the government cannot solve the problem of making the farmers prosperous and self-supporting—that is the farmers' problem."

While most farmers do need government aid in working out of the morass in which they find themselves, I fear that constant reliance on political aid will destroy all self-reliance, and that the remaining independent, courageous and intelligent farm families, along with those who are now almost hopeless, will degenerate into weaklings, standing with hands outstretched, palms up, constantly awaiting handouts. Assuredly we want to save America and American farmers from this fate.

I have confidence that we will work out of our difficulties, in time, if we will carefully study conditions, and if we will hold to the principles that have made America great and raised the standard of living of the people of this Nation to peaks that have astonished the other nations of the world.

Farm tenants and sharecroppers in the South did not participate in former times of prosperity, except very occasionally; and these unfortunates must now now be helped. But they should be helped in ways that will inspire them with ambition. Their independence, if they have any left, must not be destroyed by leading them to depend too largely on government aid. They must be encouraged to rely on their own strength of character and experience in working out their business salvation.

Timely Questions On Farm Answered

Question: How long can tobacco be held after curing before it is marketed?

Answer: This depends upon the condition of the tobacco and the care exercised in handling. As a general rule, tobacco should be marketed as soon after curing as is practical. After the weed has been left for a few days in the pack house and then "cooped" to allow the leaves to straighten out and undergo any changes necessary for the improvement in color, it should then be graded and marketed. If graded tobacco is held over, it should be repacked at least once a day to prevent mold in case the weed has a little too much moisture.

Question: How can I prevent horns from growing on my dairy calves?

Answer: The development of horns can be prevented by applying caustic soda or potash to the horn buttons when the calf is from four to eight days old. Clip the hair from over and around the button, wash and thoroughly dry clipped surface and then apply the solution with a caustic stick. The stick should be moistened on one end and rubbed carefully on each horn button two or three times, alternating between the buttons until there is a raw place about the size of a nickel. Do not rub until the spot bleeds. Care should be taken not to use too much moisture for if it gets in the eye it will cause blindness. Keep animals under shelter if there is a chance for rain.
