FILM FORECAST AT STATE THEATRE HERTFORD, N. C.

Friday Only—Luise Rainer as "The Toy Wife."

Tuesday Only—"Three Blind Mice."

Luise Rainer, only star ever to be accorded two Academy awards, proves her unqualified right to the honor with another character gem as outstanding as her "Anna Held" in "The Great Ziegfeld" and her "O-Lan" in "The Good Earth." Her "Froufrou" Brigard in "The Toy Wife," adds a delineation which may well nominate her for the third time and create still another precedent. By turn the frivolous, light-hearted girl, the equally irresponsible wife, and the broken, tragic figure which her own folly makes her, she draws a masterful and truly moving picture which any other actress of the year will be hard pressed to match.

There was Loretta Young, her usual adorable self, even in a dusty pair of overalls—feeding the chickens in a barnyard during a scene for "Three Blind Mice," her current co-starrer with Joel McCrea. Each time Director Bill Seiter called for action and camera, the scene progressed for a few feet only to be interrupted by a shriek from Loretta.

Investigation revealed that the hens were giving Loretta a gallinaeous "hot foot," by pecking at her toes. Time was called while the star's sandals were changed for less vulnerable shoes . . . and the filming went on undisturbed. "I can't understand it," murmured Loretta, "I haven't any CORNS!"
