BIBLE THOUGHT FOR WEEK

THE RECORD PROVES IT. Evil pursueth sinners; but to the righteous good shall be repaid.—Proverbs 13:21.

WE'RE PROUD OF IT

Hertford's handsome new postoffice opened without ceremonies Wednesday morning after Postmaster J. Edgar Morris and his force worked nearly all night in order to have operations running smoothly when business began the first day.

That is, no ceremonies except the utterances of pride heard on every hand as Hertford people walked in to get their mail or post a letter, and then forgot what they came in for as the elaborate surroundings claimed their full attention for the first time.

The tall white front columns are oddly suited for an important government building, and the new quarters for the post office are ones for us to be entirely proud of.

Now, when a stranger asks, "Where is the post office?" we can say, "It's the building with the tall white columns and the flag." They can't miss it—neither can the traveler, just passing through. It's the most imposing structure on that side of the street.

TRAFFIC EXPERT CAUTIONS NIGHT DRIVERS

One of the most important jobs in reducing traffic accidents is in getting the driver to appreciate the difference between day and night driving, according to Earl J. Reeder, Chief Engineer of the National Safety Council, in a recent issue of the magazine, Public Safety. Mr. Reeder says that all safety educational agencies must teach the motorist to plan his night driving to meet the peculiarities of night visibility.

Explaining the relation of light to safety, the traffic expert points out that in the daytime most objects are seen by surface detail in the diffused light of the sun. At night, however, almost all objects are distinguished in silhouette, and the effectuation of discernment by silhouette is one of the most important principles of good street and highway lighting.

In the words of Mr. Reeder, "When two drivers are approaching each other, each looking into the other's lights and not watching the edge of the road, it's a matter of the blind leading the blind." Safe driving at night is a challenge to ingenuity and a partnership job, and in his belief the driver who refuses to depress his headlights is not a partner but an enemy.

As most of our roads are at present not illuminated by fixed lighting, these are the precautions which Mr. Reeder suggests to the driver as essential to safety at night:

1. Watch for objects on the road revealed in silhouette by the headlights of approaching cars.
2. Watch the right hand edge of the road and avoid looking into other drivers' headlights.
3. Slow down at sunset to compensate for lower visibility.
4. Whenever there is a curve or hill crest ahead, revealed by the other headlights, slow down to the proper speed corresponding to the lack of view of what is around the curve or over the hill.
