

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE SACREDNESS OF HOME
International Sunday School Lesson
for November 20, 1938
Golden Text: "Keep thyself pure."-I Timothy 5:22.

Lesson Text: Exodus 20:14; Matthew 5:27; Mark 10:2-16.
Breaking the Seventh Commandment, condemning adultery, strikes at the very foundation of human relationship.

The beginning of every home is the marriage, which unites husband and wife and dedicates them to each other and the family which may come to them.

Human beings are not all beyond the possibility of error and of sin, however, and so, as in all ages our society has the problem of divorce.

Moses had decreed that a man might divorce his wife "if she find no favor in his eyes because he hath found some unseemly thing (uncleanliness, in the authorized version) in her."

WOODVILLE NEWS

MORE MEAT

Larger supplies of meat animals and larger total supplies of meats in 1939 compared with the current year are predicted by L. I. Case, extension animal husbandman at State College.

salting it or over roasting it, she could be put away."

Our modern refinements of the doctrine "incompatibility," as decreed in our courts, have gone just as far to make divorce easy, convenient and excusable.

Jesus avoided the trap of the Pharisees by referring to the Mosaic law, but explained that it was "for your hardness of heart" that such a rule was given.

The innocent victims of the wrecked home are the children, brought up in an atmosphere of hatred instead of love and helpfulness, and denied the training for useful lives that a real homelife would give them.

Herbert Hoover in a Y. M. C. A. address said: "Life goes the way youth finally takes." Therefore, as Prof. George Herbert Betts declares: "The greatest business of any generation is the education of its children."

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Webb and daughters visited Mr. Webb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Webb, on Sunday.
Mrs. Mac Ward and two children and Miss Mary Webb, of Edenton, were week-end guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Webb.
