

Man Appointed To Protect Property At Dare Beaches

Steps Taken to Stop Pillaging of Cottages In Winter

$50 REWARD

Owners Asked to Make Contribution to Pay Patrolman

Hertford owners of beach property will be interested in learning that a standing reward of $50 is open now to anyone for information resulting in arrest and conviction of any persons robbing, damaging or trespassing upon property on the Nags Head Beach, Soundside, and Kitty Hawk beaches, and Elton C. Twiford, of Kill Devil Hills has been appointed a Deputy Sheriff until May 1 to look after the property, and assist in apprehending law violators, Sheriff Victor D. Meekins stated this week.

The new officer will make a daily patrol of the entire territory, and will promptly begin action against people making unauthorized use of the property owned by non-residents.

The decision to put an officer on the beach in winter is the result of a rising tide of pilfering that has come about as access to the beaches has become easier. More than a hundred cottages are unprotected a large part of the year. There has been some stealing done by people believed to be residents of the nearby communities, but it is pretty definitely reported that property has actually been stolen and carried across the Wright Memorial Bridge, whether to places in Currituck or farther on, is hard to say.

The County authorities have been much concerned about the situation, but did not have sufficient money to keep a man on the job the year round. The Sheriff intimated a plan, adopted by the County Commissioners, and suggested to the property owners, whereby they hire a man as caretaker, who also acts as a police officer. Some of the property owners expressed a desire to cooperate, sent their check and praised the plan. Some others did not reply. Contributors enjoy caretaker service and personal attention to their property; others have the advantage to be derived from the presence of the officer.

OWL SHOW SUNDAY NIGHT

JANUARY 1 AT 12:01
"Mr. Doodle Kicks Off"

"Mr. Doodle Kicks Off" presents Joe Penner, popular radio and screen comedian, in the role of a daffy gridiron hero, in a comedy which pokes fun at collegiate football and campus life. The story, soon to be seen on the local screen, is said to be replete with songs, romance and comedy. It concerns a shy collegian whose only ambition is to lead his own orchestra. His father, however, has other ideas; he is determined that his son shall become a sensational gridiron hero, even though the young man hates athletics! To further his plans for his son, the father enters into a conspiracy with school authorities. They promise to do their best to make the young man a football celebrity, if the old man will agree to make a substantial endowment to the school when this miracle is accomplished.

Joe Penner, of course, is cast as the lad whose fight to keep out of football togs meets with failure, especially when pretty June Travis as the college president's co-ed daughter, enters the scheme.

As the football assistant-coach, Richard Lane finds it practically impossible to make a grid star out of such soft timber. He devises a series of trick plays which make quarterback Penner shine without jeopardizing his limbs, and the would-be band-leader soon becomes famous as a pigskin marvel.

Counterpointing this amusing situation is the odd affliction of the young man which brings about uproarious complications. A queer nervous reflex causes him to kick whenever he hears the strains of "Pop Goes the Weasel." It is this complex that results in the story's side-splitting climax.

Filmed in Pasadena's famous Rose Bowl, and on the University of California at Los Angeles campus, "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off" was directed by Leslie Goodwins from an original story by Mark Kelly, adapted to the screen by Bert Granet. Robert Sisk produced the film for RKO Radio.

being the same land conveyed to said Sam Banks by Wilson Turner, and reference to said deed is hereby made for further description.
