

UNCLE SAM WANTS INVESTIGATION OF FEDERAL VIOLATIONS LEFT TO F. B. I.

Federal Bureau Investigation Wants No Help From Local John Laws or Organizations; Information? Yes, But Investigations Are Out

To the end that the task may be carried out with as little confusion as possible, the President has requested all police officers, sheriffs, and all other law enforcement officers in the United States promptly to turn over to the nearest representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation any information obtained by them relating to espionage, counter-espionage, subversive activities, and violations of the neutrality laws.

The procedure to be followed in handling complaints and prosecutions of violations of Federal laws relating to these activities is outlined in a statement made by the president . . .

"The Attorney General has been requested by me to instruct the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice to take charge of investigative work in matters relating to espionage, sabotage, and violations of the neutrality regulations.

"This task must be conducted in a comprehensive manner on a national basis, and all information must be carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion and irresponsibility."

Noting that in connection with the existing international situation, all officers will doubtless receive considerable information from groups and individuals concerning "seeming subversive activities and kindred offenses, this is Uncle Sam's polite way of telling the local enforcement units to keep "hands off" and leave such matters to those who know how to handle them.

While the cooperation of every citizen in turning over useful information to the Federal Bureau of Investigation is, of course, welcomed, Federal law enforcement agencies are instructed to discourage as far as possible individuals or groups from engaging in counter-espionage or activities of an investigative nature.

In short, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it seems, does not wish to be placed in the position of approving, encouraging or sponsoring activity of an investigative nature on the part of any individual or group or organization. "The unauthorized assumption of any investigative functions by any such groups would be discouraged," the Attorney General said.

CCC Youths May Get Non-Combat Work In Case Of Draft

One Stumbling Block Removed From Path On Enrollment; Family's Need of Relief

T. L. Grier, State CCC selection supervisor, this week quoted Senator James F. Byrnes as saying that in event of national emergency necessitating a general draft, youths with mechanical and cooking experience in the CCC might, as the result of such training be assigned to non-combatant activities rather than to combat work in uniform.

The Three C's will broaden the third quarter Civilian Conservation Corps acceptance operations in North Carolina from July 1 to 20, when 2,400 enrollees will be taken in.

A family's need for relief funds will have less bearing on acceptance than unemployment and the need of the training available in the CCC.

Mr. Grier was quoting a lot of people. He quoted J. J. McEntree, national corps director, to the effect that the greatest field of service for the CCC lies in training large numbers of skilled and semi-skilled mechanics with elementary engineering experience.

Interesting to boys interested in the Three C's and training for non-combatant activities in case of draft, is the news that "enrollment is open to all young men not employed and in need of work who are between the ages of 18 and 28" and that "no applicant will now be excluded from selection because his family is not in need of the allotment to be sent home each month."

Enough To Make Us See Red

America is leaning over backward to insure protection for an organization whose members have potentially obligated themselves even to overthrow our government by force and violence, while the party still, under existing law, may function as a political party.

Reds! Communists! And a Justice of the New York State Supreme Court rules that it is not libelous to call an American a Communist.

As the Industrial Press Service recently stated "It may not be libelous at the present time to call a person in the United States a Communist—but it strikes us as being about the most insulting non-libelous remark that could possibly be addressed to an American Citizen!"

The decision of the New York Justice on the question shows how extremely careful Americans are to preserve the democratic rights which individuals and minority groups in this country enjoy, but in the case of the Communists it seems like encouraging a forest fire to afford protection for an organization actually rooted in foreign lands that has no respect for and no understanding of the very principles which make its continued existence here possible.

are local selecting agencies operating in conjunction with the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, State selection agency.

This bit of news released from A. Laurence Aydt's Information Service, SBOPW in Raleigh, is doubly interesting in that it throws new light on two developments in the Civilian Conservation Corps.

First. That the CCC is anxious to enlist more youngsters and is leaving out the stipulation that the family should be in need of the funds paid to the accepted CCC boy. This stipulation excluded a large number of youths from CCC ranks when the plan was first getting underway.

Second. That a vague promise of non-combat duties in case national emergency calls for a draft is being held out as an inducement to possible enrollees.

With the CCC operating and maintaining the largest group of mechanized equipment in the country, 68 central repair shops will be in operation by the fall in which unemployed youths can learn to repair trucks, power shovels, pumps, graders, generators and compressors under a full-time instructor.

Each of the fifteen hundred camps in the country conducts a cooking and baking school in which 22,000 boys have been trained in kitchen activities since 1933.

Refugees From War Zone Are Coming To E. City And Vicinity

Salvation Army Preparing To Take In Twenty-five Little Britishers

A worker under Envoy Cook, head of the Salvation Army in Elizabeth City, on a periodic visit to Hertford Monday said that the Salvation Army in the Pasquotank metropolis is preparing to receive twenty-five British child refugees.

Those who have followed international events in the daily newspapers have no doubt learned that Great Britain is preparing to evacuate (or has already evacuated) something like two million children between the ages of two and fifteen years.

The worker was not making a plea for homes for the British children; twenty-five is the number the Salvation Army alone can care for. However, he said, others can be placed in private homes and help take care of the situation in that manner.

Moving of England child population is not intended to be a permanent thing; it is only to get them out of harm's way for the duration of the present war. When it is over they will be returned to their parents.

One other town in North Carolina which has made definite arrangements for care of child refugees is Wake Forest, where another twenty-five will be taken into private homes.

Those in this country who wish to take in British child refugees for an indefinite visit, should get in touch with Envoy Cook.

Plans for the evacuation were begun several weeks ago in preparation for Adolf Hitler's promise of unleashing mass assault on the British Isles.

"It is our duty to care for these unfortunate little refugees," the worker quoted Envoy Cook as saying.

Farmers Organized In Defense Program

Farmers of North Carolina are organized for any emergency, says Dr. I. O. Schaub, director of the State College Extension Service. They are ready to meet any call for contributions to National defense in the form of food, feed and the materials for clothing. They have been preparing for such a call in recent years. They have experienced leadership to do the job, he declared.

Dr. Schaub said that the National Farm Program has enabled farmers to become better organized and more ready to work together than at any time in history. He also pointed out that, through the Agricultural Conservation Program, the fertility of the soil has been built up to where the necessities of war could be produced in greater quantities, with less time and expense.

"Our Extension organization was only three years old when the United States entered the first World War in 1917," Dr. Schaub continued. "Yet, with limited personnel and experience, the farm and home agents and subject matter specialists provided efficient leadership in that great crisis. Farm and home demonstration work is now 26 years old, and we have an organization of trained agents, specialists and administrators. Every county in the State is organized for Extension work."

"Many of the farm and home agents, canning and clothing specialists, and others who directed emergency activities of rural people in 1917 and 1918, and again during the depression years, are still with the organization. They did their jobs efficiently then; they have the confidence of the farm people, and are ready to lead again.

"It will not be necessary to set up new services, or new organizations of farmers to carry on agriculture's part of the National defense program."
