The SNAPSHOT GUILD

TWO IN A PICTURE

This picture is better because it has a natural "center of interest"—the girl's face. When you have two or more subjects in a picture, make one more prominent than the others.

TWO people often yield a better picture than just one—especially in the summer time, when lots of young romances are budding. However, to make these pictures most effective, there are a few points you want to keep in mind.
 The first point is to make one of your subjects more prominent than the other. This keeps the interest from being divided, and it's easy to do.
 Just have one of the subjects doing something, while the other watches. Then the attention will naturally go to the subject who is most active.

An interesting example of this is shown in the picture above. The girl, dribbling sand from her hand, attracts your eye first. Then, when your glance strays to the boy's face, you are immediately turned back to the girl's face, because he is looking in that direction.
 There are some other good, instructive points in this picture. You will notice that the girl's head is somewhat higher in the picture space than the boy's head; also her face is more brightly lighted by the sun, while his face is mostly in shadow. All these help to make the girl the center of interest.

Every picture should have such a center of interest. No doubt you remember seeing group pictures, such as a picture of a graduating class, in which each face was as prominent as the others. Pictures of that type are of course very useful as records, but they do not have the pictorial charm of an informal arrangement—because the "center of interest" is lacking.

Naturally, when you're picturing a couple, or a larger group, you do not want to slight anyone. However, for best effect, you should make one more prominent than the others. Sometimes just a turn of the subject's head, or a slight change of your own position, will do it. And it's a valuable point to remember, because you'll be taking lots of these pictures during the summer—they're the type of snapshot that adds interest to your album.

Lipstick of Hindu Women

The lipstick of Hindu women is pan or betel leaf chewed with chunan lime, which leaves the tongue, teeth and lips as ruddy as a sunset. Most distinctive item in the Hindu woman's make-up is the wafer stamped between her brows. This is not a caste-mark. When black, the wafer is made of burnt, powdered sago, mixed with sandalwood oil; when pink, it comes from the dried and powdered "kumku" flower, common in the land.

Origin of Domestic Dog

The origin of the domestic dog is unknown, but it is thought to be of composite descent from wild dogs and, perhaps, some extinct species of animal.
