

WHO IS TO BE EXEMPTED FROM SELECTIVE TRAINING AND SERVICE AND WHO ISN'T

Those Drafted Will Get Their Jobs Back or United States District Attorney Will Know Reason Why

Perusing the Conference Report on the selective training and service act of 1940, one finds that Congress hereby declares that it is imperative to increase and train the personnel of the armed forces of the United States.

To this end, and principally to build an army and navy of such size and formidableness as to frighten the living daylights out of any other people who would entertain ideas of poaching on us, the compulsory training system is soon to go into effect.

It might be well to point out some of the items under various sections of the Selective Training and Service Act. The Conference Report is far too involved in legislative language to make interesting reading, but the thing is potent with meaning for thousands of men between the ages of 20 and 36, their employers and their families.

To those scanning the avenues of draft-dodging (there are probably none, certainly not in Hertford) the act continually mentions State and Federal jobs "concerning public health, safety or interest."

It appears that these are the only jobs the draft cannot touch. But other than those jobs clearly outlined by the Conference Report as "necessary to the maintenance of the public health, safety or interest," it will be up to the local draft board to pass on.

Here is who is exempted:

Commissioned officers, warrant officers, pay clerks and enlisted men of the Regular Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Public Health Service, the Federally recognized active National Guard, the Officers' Reserve Corps, the Regular Army Reserve; cadets, United States Military Academy, midshipmen, U. S. Naval Academy, cadets, United States Coast Guard Academy, Reserve Officers' Training Corps or Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps, diplomatic representatives, technical attaches of foreign embassies and legations, consuls general, consuls, vice consuls, and consular agents of foreign countries, residing in the United States, who are not citizens of the United States.

While holding office, the following are exempted; the vice president of the United States, the governors of the states and territories, members of the legislative bodies of each, judges of the courts of record of the states and territories and the district of Columbia.

And now let's look at the part of the act that has to do with conscientious objectors: "Regular or duly ordained ministers of religion, and students who are preparing for the ministry in theological or divinity schools recognized as such for more than one year prior to the date of the enactment of this act, shall be exempt from training and service (but not from registration)."

All these are the automatic exemptions, local draft boards must sustain other conscientious objectors. Those whom the local draft board sustain can be drafted into non-combat training and if they are still conscientiously objecting can be assigned to work of national importance under civilian direction.

An objection not sustained by the local board can be appealed to the appeal board and then to the Department of Justice. The appeal board can (but needn't necessarily) follow the recommendation of the Department of Justice. What the local board recommends is about the deciding factor regardless of appeals.

That more or less covers the conscientious objectors and now let's see what the Act says about getting your job back after the year's training:

Boiled down, it states that anyone who leaves a job or position in order to perform the training will be on a sort of furlough or leave of absence during his period of training. If at the end of that time he is still qualified to perform his duties he shall be restored to his position or to a position "of like seniority, status, and pay," or the United States District Court will know the reason why.

If the process of pleading by the person entitled to the benefits of such provisions as these is upheld the employer will be required to compensate such person for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of such employer's unlawful action.

In other words, the drafted man is bound by law to get his job back at the old salary or one just as good if the employer is still in business. That's the employer's only out: The Act says "unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so."

The United States District Attorney will act and appear as attorney for such employees. No court costs or fees will be taxed against the person applying for his old job or for benefits he missed during his period of training.

The Conference Report is 24 pages long. It is impossible to cover all provisions, but it is noted that there is to be no race or color discrimination—either in selection and training or in execution or interpretation of the other provisions.

Fair Will Observe Vocational Day

More than 10,000 students of vocational agriculture will participate in exhibits as guests of the State Fair which opens at Raleigh, October 8, Roy H. Thomas, State Supervisor of vocational agricultural education, announced today.

"Vocational Agricultural Day" will be October 10 and all students will be admitted free who are wearing the traditional "skull caps" designating their membership in a vocational school, Dr. J. S. Dorton, Fair Manager, said.

Ten booths featuring home project work of students, livestock and livestock judging contests will be features of the vocational program. Two large silver loving cups, to be awarded in the judging contest, will be presented by Commissioner of Agriculture W. Kerr Scott.

Displays by Future Farmers of America will be judged on the basis of educational value, attractiveness and simplicity. The vocational exhibits will be expanded this year and for the first time students will enter swine, dairy and beef cattle.

"We expect the program presented by vocational students and teachers to be an outstanding contribution to the agricultural and educational displays of the 1940 State Fair," said Thomas.

Home economics, rehabilitation and industrial education programs will also be featured in the vocational education departments.

While the 1940 exposition will paramount agricultural, educational and industrial progress through displays, the Fair management has also "booked" prominent entertainment features including nine grandstand acts and a revue furnished by Geo. Hamid; the World of Mirth Shows on the mile-long midway; Lucky Teter and His Hell Drivers; auto, harness and motorcycle races.

W. M. U. MEETS

The Woman's Missionary Union of Woodville Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, September 10, at the church with Mrs. M. R. Griffin presiding. The meeting was opened by all singing "Come, Thou Almighty King." A short business session was held after which Mrs. A. R. Cooke gave a very interesting program, the topic being "To the Jew First." Mrs. J. A. Bray led the devotional which was taken from Hebrew 1:1-8; 2:1-6. She then led in prayer, remembering especially the Jews. "Friends of Israel" was sung and the meeting was then dismissed with prayer by Miss Beulah Bogue.

Those present were: Mesdames C. A. Bogue, G. W. Gregory, Mary Bray, H. G. Swayne, J. A. Bray, Rupert Stanton, Wendell Matthews, M. R. Griffin and A. R. Cooke, and two visitors, Misses Mildred Bogue and Beulah Bogue.
