LIFE COULD BE SO NICE!

She was very proud of her new car, but perfect from the kitchen to the car boxes at the entrance and she had Jim's new car. It was a new one, and took them miles to their parents' house back every week-end. "It would be so nice," she said, "if you suppose men want to buy a car? Jim says there's plenty of everything to go around. I said, 'there is plenty of it and it goes around pretty well in this country. Take yourself, you and Jim haven't got a car. And you're perfectly going to have a still bigger car. It's things and these, which you take for that people in the countries that are so eager for it. It is by accident that for years ago Hitler promised his people an expensive car. If he could make it, it would be so good so that almost every family in the country had its own little automobile, it would make more difference than all the territorial conquests in the world. "And what do you think the Russians have been struggling for all these years? One of our most important newspaper women said what struck her when she went to Russia about 12 years ago was that the revolution she had gone to observe was actually an attempt at a violently imposed industrial advance. The Russians were trying to change from a feudal system of great land owners and peasant labor to the electric age almost overnight. What they were really doing was trying to catch up with us. Their aims haven't been achieved because they are the result not of political but of industrial revolution. "As you wash your dishes with water that flows piping hot from a faucet and clean your rugs with electricity and go places in your car, remember this: Russia and Germany have overturned governments, upset order and established a reign of terror in order to try to get what we have already... distribution of the fruits of modern mass production among the people as a whole."

Advertising Results

Last week Dr. C. A. Davenport decided to sell his son's old bicycle, which was not needed due to the present of a newer one, so the doctor inserted a small classified ad in The Perquimans Weekly... the paper was issued on Friday and by mid-afternoon Saturday the doctor informed us that he had had some 25 inquiries about the bicycle and had sold it... that is conclusive evidence that advertising in The Weekly brings results. You, too, may have some discarded articles that can be converted into cash by using a small classified ad in The Weekly. Why not try it?

ring out in denunciation of such a one. Quoting from another writer, who paraphrases the taunt song of Habakkuk thus: "Woe unto him that distills and brews alcoholic beverages that he may fatten his purse by that which degrades mankind! Woe unto him that sells the stuff and shuts his eyes to the consequences! Woe unto him that prepares the alluring advertisements to induce others to drink! Woe unto him who publishes magazines and newspapers which carry such advertisements! Woe unto him that uses the radio to slip his noxious announcements into unsuspecting homes! Woe unto him that in the name of hospitality offers a narcotic as a social drink! Woe unto him or her that serves the innocent-looking cocktail which awakens the craving for alcohol! Woe unto him that votes for the sale of liquor that business may be stimulated! Woe unto him that tolerates the sale and taxation of liquor that he may escape heavier personal taxes! "The individual who for any advantage or reason, is responsible for inducing, directly or indirectly, others to drink alcoholic beverages, is responsible for supporting a social evil which has long taken, and continues to take, its terrific toll in human life and slavery."

Six-Point Program For Quality Poultry Given

T. T. Brown, Extension poultry specialist of N. C. State College, says the greatest need in the North Carolina poultry industry is to improve the quality of poultry products offered on the market. "Local distributors of poultry products are always glad to handle our local products if we will furnish them quality eggs and meat in sufficient quantity and steadily," he says. As a six-point program for producing quality poultry, Brown lists: (1) Keep only purebred poultry and secure the chicks or stock from a dependable breeder; (2) avoid overcrowding—allow baby chicks at least one square foot of floor space for each two chicks, exclusive of space occupied by the brooder; (3) provide plenty of ventilation without floor drafts; (4) use high quality feed and feed liberally; (5) provide ample feed and watering equipment; and (6) clean and disinfect the house and equipment thoroughly before the chicks are started, and keep the house and yards clean. Three marketing hints are also given by the State College specialist: (1) Destroy thin, light, and diseased birds, never offer them on the market and market only finished birds; (2) grade and assort live market birds according to size, color and finish; and (3) starve birds to be dressed for 15 to 20 hours before slaughter, but do not withhold drinking water. "Unless we meet the quality requirements," Brown declared, "we shouldn't blame local distributors from going to California and the Middle West for eggs and dressed poultry, and to Texas for dressed turkeys. As much as some of us apparently dislike it, it will be necessary to dress and grade market poultry and turkeys, and to candler and grade eggs before these products reach the retailer."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE INDIVIDUAL'S RESPONSIBILITY REGARDING BEVERAGE ALCOHOL

Internal Sunday School Lesson for February 2, 1941

Gen Text: "Abstain from the appearance of evil.—I Thess.

Les Gen Text: Habakkuk 2:15; 4:12; Mark 9:42-48; I Thess. 5:22.

As has been the custom through-out the years, there is a lesson dealing with some form of temperance every three months. This will be true during 1941 as well, beginning with our lesson for this week.

The four temperance lessons this year concern important aspects of the subject. The first deals with an individual's responsibility regarding beverage alcohol, the second the responsibility of the home concerning this evil, the third the responsibility of the organized church toward beverage alcohol, and the series closes with a discussion of the responsibility of the community and civic authorities on this question. All in all, this ought to be an interesting and informative series of discussions on this very important matter which affects every single person in every single community in our land.

Of course, we cannot attempt a discussion of the responsibility of others toward this subject until we definitely and finally decide just what our own responsibility is. Because our bodies are the "temples of God" whose we are, anything that we do that may destroy our bodies is a desecration of our "temples," and is, therefore, a sin. Surely no sane person can argue that the drinking of alcohol will, not eventually, destroy one's body.

Doubly sinful, however, is he who encourages another to drink for the deliberate purpose of causing intoxication to another. The words of the Old Testament prophet Habakkuk are we to refrain from doing anything which to us is not harmful because that thing might prove a stumbling-block to a weaker brother? Or, should we go our merry way, doing what we want to and like to, with never a thought of the effect of our actions upon our fellowman? Whether we want to believe it or acknowledge it, or not, the fact remains that no person is without his influence for good or bad, upon others. Jesus had this in mind when he warned against causing humble people to stumble (Mark 9:42-48). Paul accepted the power of his influence when he refrained from doing what might prove to be harmful in its effect upon others (I Cor. 8).

We hesitate to contemplate the price which so-called "high society" is going to be called upon to pay for "setting the style" in alcohol-drinking which has led and is still leading many people who follow their lead down to destruction and early graves. Isn't it a pity that our society leaders couldn't use their immense influence for the uplift, rather than the destruction, of their fellowmen?
